Moratorium necessary

The Carmel Sanitary District's board of directors is currently assessing the need for a moratorium on sewer hook-ups. The move sounds like a harsh one, but several board members and the district's general manager feel the present sanitary plant has already reached its capacity. Rated at 2.4 million gallons of sewage a day (MGD), the plant regularly hits 2.1 MGD with peak days of 2.7 MGD. The month of April averaged 2.3 MGD.

The April load resulted in complaints of severe odor from the Mission Fields area and forced the district to lay out an extra $3,000 to take 31 tank truck loads of sludge to the dump during that month. Sludge relief, in the form of a new digester, is at least two years away, and increased capacity, in the form of a clarifier, is even further off.

Meanwhile, it seems possible to improve sludge handling to the point where odor, at least, is lessened. Direct pumping of sludge from tank to truck is presently being studied and a district-owned tank truck is a must. But since a real, concrete solution to the district's capacity problem has not yet been found, a moratorium on sewer hook-ups seems to be the only appropriate course of action.

associated with the library. But, as we think back over a few months it does seem to reflect a slowly-gelling attitude. One that we don't particularly care for.

We remember a special meeting no one associated with the library bothered to tell us about. But, not only weren't we told, the public also had no idea that the meeting was to take place. This was a joint meeting of county and city officials and the library board. No trivial matter, this meeting could have been attended by many with an interest in the library's future. But very few even knew about it.

Why weren't the press and public informed? "Well," we were told, "no one comes to our meetings anyway... we called those we thought would be interested."

How nice, but we suggest the library may have too many copies of Catch-22 on its shelves. As long as people aren't informed of meetings or items scheduled for discussion, chances are attendance will not be particularly large. And, we suppose, as long as attendance isn't great little effort will go into informing the public of meetings.

A little less defensiveness and more of a commitment to serving the public would probably help.

The public's interest

Last Thursday we attempted to find out what was due for discussion at that evening's Library Board meeting. One of our staff people called the library as a private citizen and simply asked what was on the agenda. We don't know, was the answer, the agenda hasn't been made out yet! And this surprising answer came mid-morning of the day of the meeting. How then, we posed, is a citizen to know whether or not attendance at the library board meetings would be interesting, informative or productive? Well, you can call back later in the day.

It seems to us that agendas could certainly be completed sooner than midday of the meeting date. At least if not physically made-up, items for discussion could be decided upon and the public informed.

This is not one of the larger problems we face, nor is it indicative of the generally cooperative nature of people

The name of the Mission Ranch today means a good meal, dancing, drinks, singing around the piano, where once it stood for a hard-worked dairy under the leadership of first John Martin, fresh from Canada, and later Andrew Stewart, his stepson, before it passed from this pioneering family.

Glengarry County in Ontario, Canada, was a settlement of Highland Scots and of necessity they struck out into more promising lands as they multiplied in their chosen land.

Wherever they went they took with them the old flavor of Scotland, especially in their devotion to the Presbyterian Church, or what they would have called their "Kirk."

John Martin was the first to arrive in our area and he found a piece of land to his liking right to the west and north of the Carmel Mission, then fallen upon hard times. This holding included all Carmel Point as well.

It was said that the Mission was used by American soldiers from the Presidio in Monterey for target practice, although probably it was more a matter of random shooting that pitted the walls.

And the adobe outbuildings at the Mission, once put up by corralled Indians, first from the local peoples and later by any pressed into service from farther afield, were in a state of melting under the winter rains.

Martin soon had buildings of his own nearby for his cows and a "hoose" in his Scots tongue, a house for a family, but no family.

Now there was a certain widow lady back in Canada — if the story I heard as a child is correct and I feel more impelled to rely on memory than dig out hard facts — so John Martin corresponded with this Mrs. Stewart and urged her to come to his country and westward to California.

For my New England relatives only a little more than a generation past, California seemed off the edge of the world, so what must a mythical California have seemed for a young Canadian lady all those years ago?

Mrs. Stewart was reluctant in deciding whether to venture so far into a strange and no doubt heathen land, and she inquired about the matter of a church.

Not bashful, Mr. Martin in haste reassured her that there truly was a "kirk" right next door.

So the journey began, and Mrs. Stewart started out with two small sons, Stewarts, to seek our distant shore. At almost the end of the trail, there was a long and hard wagon trip from San Jose.

One son, Andrew, later told me how delighted he was when he came over the hill and saw so much ocean barring the way from going further.

By the time he told me this, I was a small boy and he a man toward his 60s.

Andrew had become a kind of father image to me, since my own father was away most of the time teaching in a faraway university, and I was living almost on the edge of the lands of the Mission Ranch.

Each afternoon, Andrew Stewart would walk along a path through our land to what is now the Walker tract, recently annexed to incorporated Carmel.

I would wait near a young oak which had one special branch which curved downward and made an arch over our path, which also ran from our house toward town.

Mr. Stewart was going to feed and water his goats, a band mostly of brown Toggenbergs, with some mixed Saanen nannies among them, and I would join to help.

Andrew Stewart was very proud of the new buildings he was always adding on the ranch property, a modern milking barn for his cows, now the dance hall, and the hay barn, then a delight for children who wanted to slide down the hay to the ground — for which we soon got into trouble.

Before she left us, John Martin's bride, now with several Martin children following the Stewarts, was a beautiful vision as she drove her carriage up Dolores Street to town.

I remember her beautiful hair and the horse she drove with its matching color. She was a picture out of some old Currier and Ives. To me her hair was a lovely auburn.

Two of her descendants are also mine, since I have got into the business of having not only children but descendants as well, Anna and Mike Williams of Carmel Valley. Both have more than a touch of the Scot in their features.

But the unanswered question remains. Just what did the Martin bride think when she found out that the supposed Presbyterian "kirk" next door turned out to be a Catholic Mission?

Certainly she had to agree that the God of her fathers could be worshipped in such beautiful surroundings with a "kirk" of her choice right on her doorstep.

And that all is fair in love and war, even a little white lie about a "kirk"!

County planners

CV Ranch vote ends in tie 4-4

By LESLIE JOHNSON

In a volatile session Wednesday afternoon, the Monterey County planning commission sent the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan to the board of supervisors with no recommendation after successive votes failed to receive a majority in favor or against the plan.

With chairman Ed Whitaker disqualifying himself on the basis of possible conflict of interest, the commission found itself split four-four on motions to approve or deny the plan.

Voting against recommending the plan were commissioners Leon Stutzman, Eleanor Taylor, Marit Evans and Charmaine Cruchett. In favor of recommending the plan were commissioners Dr. Ed Marcucci, J. Jimenez, Peter Cailotto and Darrell Bengard.

Disagreement began early in the public hearing when vice-chairman Evans asked Welcome Randal from the county health department to read a communication received that afternoon from the state department of health.

Myron Etienne, attorney for the proponents, objected to the reading on several grounds: The hearing had been closed to comment from the floor, precluding response from developers; representatives from the department had already made appearances before the commission; and, the letter was "full of inaccuracies."

In the letter, H. R. Witt, senior sanitary engineer in the water sanitation section of the state department of health, recommended the commission deny the project for several reasons.

Witt's letter said the developer had "not given us assurance that there is an adequate quantity of water available (from deep wells), nor is there sufficient data to demonstrate" the water quality is acceptable.

Further, he said, the proposed sewage treatment plant and spray irrigation system would "deteriorate the quality of the underground water table to the degree where it will no longer be usable for domestic purposes."

When he was later questioned by the commission as to the sufficiencies of two conditions to solve the problems he noted, Witt called the first "perfectly acceptable to the state department of health," and said he was "in full agreement" with another.

But the fireworks occurred before then at the commission level, when Cailotto vigorously questioned the propriety of the letter received about an hour before the hearing began.

"The letter appears quite damaging as far as approval of this project is concerned. What I want to know is why are we getting it at this late date? This could kill the project," Cailotto said.

noting that state health department representatives had appeared at previous hearings and not objected to the proposed systems before.

Mrs. Evans responded that the letter was sent in connection with a request she had made of the department. "I am extremely concerned about my oath of office, especially in regards to the health of the public," she began.

She related a story of a round table discussion she had participated in four years ago with experts in the field of sanitation who warned her to keep her car windows rolled up if she drove within a mile of areas where treated wastewater was used for irrigation because of the risk of viral infection.

Mrs. Evans also discussed a meeting she attended in Washington, D.C., two years ago when the Environmental Protection Agency revealed it had discovered live polio viruses four miles out to sea in a line of sewage flow.

As far as the timing of the response was concerned, she indicated that "perhaps the department had not had enough time to study all the conditions."

Project director Kaye Chandler later refuted that statement, saying his records show the first draft of conditions were sent to the state health department, including to Witt, on Feb. 12.

He further indicated the company had answered a request for additional information from the department on Feb. 20.

After Mrs. Evans' discourse, Cailotto resumed his tack on the lateness of the response. "We had state representatives here before and they didn't bring up anything of this nature," he said.

"We asked them specific questions and they specifically said there would be no problems under certain conditions," Cailotto continued.

"A letter of this nature is contradictory to what the representatives at the public hearing said. Somewhere along the line, we're being taken," he concluded.

Dr. Marcucci agreed with him. "This is highly irregular. Besides, the conditions are so strict that these problems can be handled. If the developers can't comply with the conditions, that's the end of it."

Jimenez concurred, "We knew this was a long-term development. If they run into a technical problem, we'll have to solve it as they go along. I believe the agencies responsible for all these conditions will have to reconsider it as it goes along."

Stutzman agreed the letter was untimely, but indicated he felt it did not create any new problems for the commission.

"I'm sorry this has come up this way, for it may cloud the basic issues," he began. "The basic facts were

Sanitary district reaches capacity; moratorium on hook-ups possible

By DAVID COLE

"It appears we are at our maximum capacity, or kicking around it right now," says Carmel Sanitary Board member Ted Weller.

Although a Kennedy Engineering study on the sanitary district's plant capacity is not due until the June board meeting, it is obvious that the district has some real problems.

The California Regional Water Quality Control Board in San Luis Obispo recently issued a warning that the district was in violation of effluent standards during the month of January. Such violations can carry with them fines as high as $6,000 per day, although no fine was mentioned in the regional board's May letter to the district.

Two residents of the Mission Fields neighborhood, across the Carmel River from the sanitary plant, complained of odors at the board's May meeting. A petition complaining about persistent smells from the plant, and urging a limited moratorium on future sewer hook-ups until odor problems are solved, is currently being circulated around the Mission Fields area.

The plant's sludge drying beds are full, despite 31 tank truck loads of sludge sanitary district manager Max Drewien reports were carted to the Marina landfill site during the last month.

"The solution to this problem is not only a larger digester and sludge thickener," says Drewien, "but a secondary clarifier and a tank truck to haul off the digested sludge from the bottom of the digester and from the secondary system."

Unfortunately this solution, already proposed by the district, is tied up at the state level and — even if it is okayed tomorrow — would take between 18 and 24 months to complete.

Meanwhile, the amount of sewage flowing into the district's treatment plant continues to increase.

During the winter months two years ago, flows were around 1.7 million gallons a day (MGD) in a plant believed to have a 3 MGD capacity. This year, during a dry winter, average flows were around 2.1 and district engineer David Kennedy reminded board members that the actual capacity of the plant was 2.4 MGD — not the 3 MGD at which it was rated in 1971.

But there are indications that the plant's practical capacity is even lower than Kennedy's 2.4 MGD. During April, the monthly average (probably due to the influx of Easter vacation tourists) hit a high of 2.3 and the results were odor complaints and more sludge than the district could handle.

Even during months averaging 2 MGD — January was one of those — a bad weekend or two can throw the treatment facility into disarray. The weekend of the Crosby golf tournament, for instance, brought the district a Sunday of 2.7 MGD.

Large influxes of sewage tend to throw everything out of balance at the plant and Drewien stresses that you can't just push a button to adjust the complicated biological processes which break down the sewage. For this reason, recovery from "big weekends" is usually slow.

"My concern is that the increasing flows from our community along with the additional flows from the influx of tourists this summer will put an additional load on our already over-taxed sludge digestion system," Drewien says.

Drewien isn't alone in his concern. District board member Ken McGinnis points to the proposed Meaharry Motel, 162 units at the mouth of the valley, and asks whether the district can handle this kind of load since it will only serve to worsen the district's peak load problems.

In a listing of projected additions to the district, engineer Kennedy foresees an additional 350,000 to 400,000 MGD by 1980, which would put the plant over its presently rated capacity.

Mrs. Tom Brown, a Mission Fields resident present at the board's May meeting, speaks of "more or less constant odor problems" now, and the thrust of the Mission Fields petition

What went wrong?

According to sanitary district engineer David Kennedy, the district's current capacity problems are a result of the times.

The $3 million project which created the present Carmel sanitary treatment facility was originally planned in the late 1960s and formalized in 1971. At the time, California required only primary treatment and the federal clean water amendments had not come into being.

In fact, when the district planned the advanced "activated-sludge" treatment facility it now has, the state refused to give grants for the secondary portion of it, so the district cut costs by eliminating a digester.

What the district had when it was completed was a facility handling about 1.5 million gallons per day (MGD) of sewage, and capable of handling twice as much.

Then, in 1972, Federal Law 92-500 was passed and in 1973 water quality standards were set — far higher standards than either the state or the district had anticipated.

Nevertheless, the district was still able to reach those standards and surpass them with the present facility. The only problem was that the capacity of the plant was subsequently reduced from 3 MGD to around 2.4 MGD.

Since the district plant had been built to add on additional facilities as they were needed, (the district has traditionally followed the "pay as you go" philosophy), and since the sewage was nearing the 2 MGD mark, plans were made for the building of a new digester and a clarifier in 1974.

The modifications would have placed the plant's capacity back up to 3 MGD, according to Kennedy, but two things went wrong.

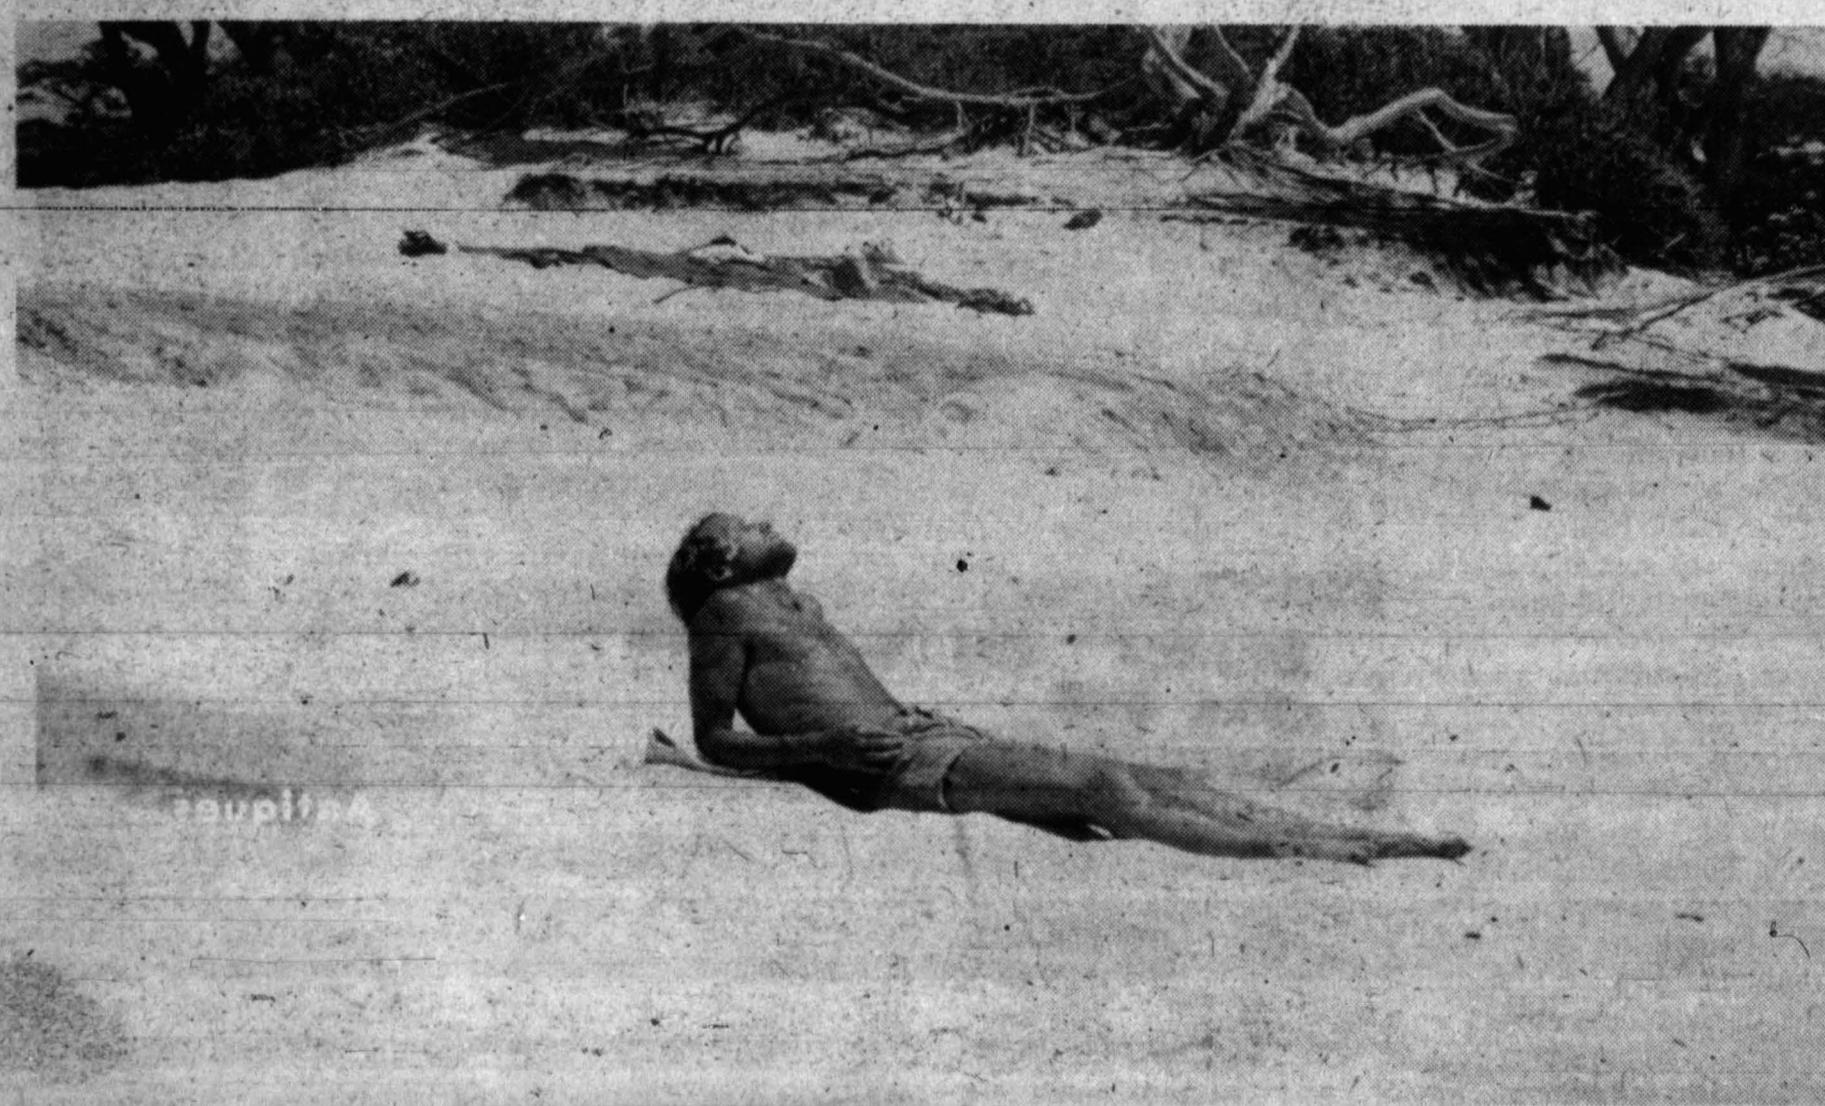

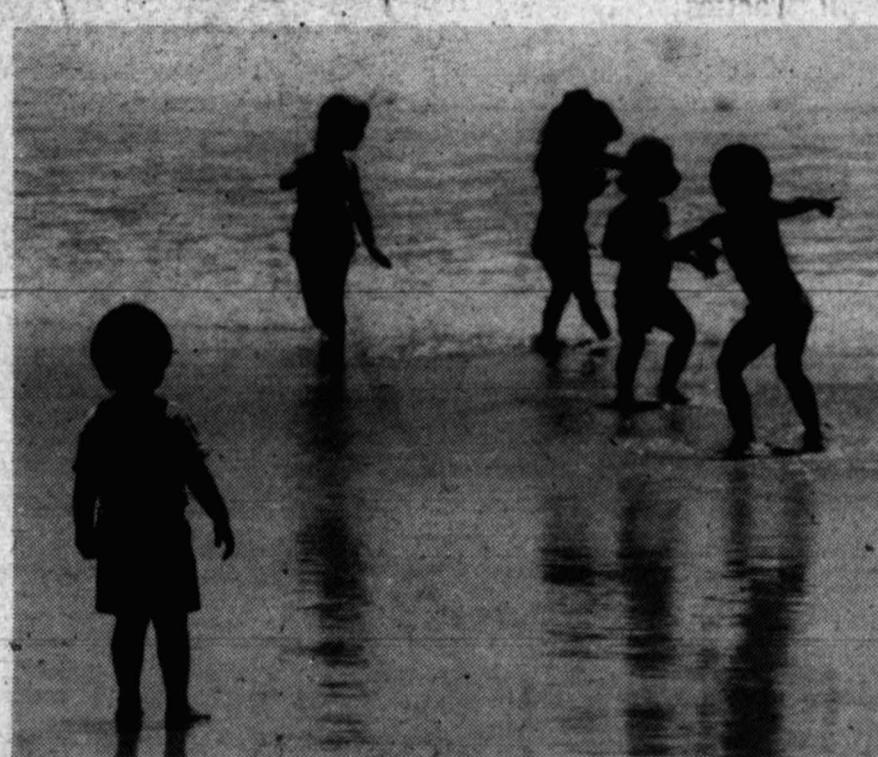

First of all, the EPA called the clarifier "growth inducing" and demanded an environmental review, and the possibility of an $800,000 grant from the state for the digester delayed plans for that facility.

In 1975 the Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS) designation for Carmel Bay was made and an area-wide facilities plan was requested for 1978. The state frowned upon the addition of new facilities before that plan was completed.

Kennedy contends that the conditions of the times changed too fast for Carmel, and many other sanitary districts around the state. The district has seen the need for its proposed digester and clarifier since 1974, but projects that took two years from start to finish in 1970 now take from five to six years, due to special reports, grants and hearings.

Hot fun in the...

SUMMERTIME (?) It may not be summer yet, but you wouldn't have known judging by temperatures last Wednesday. Photographer David Cole visited Carmel Beach and found a host of people sunning and funning in weather not experienced too often around here. People sunbathing, children playing in the surf, swimmers and surfers were all a common sight on that uncommon day. The abnormal temperatures didn't last long, however, as the climate returned to Peninsula averages by the weekend.

Food conference slated

Hartnell College will sponsor a one-day symposium on "Food, Agriculture and the Consumer" Saturday May 22 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Salinas Community Center. Statewide and local leaders will examine a variety of agricultural and consumer issues facing the country today.

Designed for consumers, homemakers, agricultural leaders, professionals in food related industries, students and others concerned with the relationship between the food industry and the consumer, this symposium will explore issues and alternatives available to the agricultural industry and consumers.

Featured speaker will be Dr. Paul Ehrlich, professor at Stanford University, researcher in the field of population biology and author of The End of Affluence, The Population Bomb, and co-author of Population, Resources and Environment. He will speak on "Meeting World Food Needs: Can It Be Done?"

Other speakers and discussion panels will deal with current problems of rising cost of living index, shortages and pressing economic issues confronting consumers and producers alike.

Linda Akulian, San Francisco Consumer Action and President of Berkeley Coop will discuss "Food Prices: What's Happening to Them and Why." This will be followed by a panel moderated by Donna Elder mission's conditions.

The commission's San Diego hearing was the final appeal for the Costas within the coastal commission, and the Costas refused to speculate about possible legal action.

The Costas first made their application to the coastal commission last October, requesting four splits of 10 acres each in an area zoned five-acre minimum. The intention was to sell off one parcel for financing and then farm the other three with Mrs. Costa's brother and wife, saving one parcel to sell in case of an emergency.

In its staff report, the commission cited cumulative problems of erosion, disposal of waste water, and loss of visual resources in the ecologically important coastal estuarine system as reasons for denying the Costa's application for a four-way subdivision.

The commission's 7-2 vote granted the Costas the right to divide their 42-acre site into two — but not the requested four — parcels. Removed from the permit were requirements for undergrounding utilities and extensive scenic easements which formerly took up over 40 percent of the property.

The Costas, who appeared at both the San Francisco and the San Diego meetings, expressed dismay at the commission's decision. Considering what they felt were their property rights, they asked how they could possibly accept the com-and including William Ramsey, president, Grower-Shopper Vegetable Association; Stanley Johnson, executive vice president, Northern California Grocer's Association; Don Wolf, marketing manager, InterHarvest; and Richard Nutter, agriculture commissioner, Monterey County.

Vernon L. Shahbazian, chief, Bureau of Marketing, California Department of Agriculture, will speak on "Marketing Orders: How Do They Affect Agriculture and Food Prices?" The discussion following will be moderated by Dan Smith, consumer affairs director, California Citizens Action Group; Herbert Baum, chairman, Strawberry Advisory Board; Karl Christerson, chairman, Dry Bean Advisory Board; and Wendi Katzoff, public member, Iceberg Lettuce Research and Advisory Board.

"Agriculture and the Consumer: View From Sacramento" will be the subject of Robert Nimmo, Assemblyman, 29th District, California Legislature.

Three aspects of "Getting More for Your Food Dollar," will be examined. Jennifer Cross, author of The Supermarket Trap, will discuss "Supermarket Survival Tactics;" Robert Rolston, manager, California Beef Council, will explore "Is Now the Time to Buy Beef?" and Liz Spiegel, Tri-County Senior Nutrition Project, will discuss "Food and Nutrition Needs."

New shopping alternatives, will be examined by two speakers, LaBerta Miller, food program nutritionist, Monterey County Department of Community Services, will speak on "Operation Brown Bag and Senior Citizens".

presented adequately on sewage and some of this was discussed and alluded to, for example through the testimony by Dr. Betty Davis."

"This is not a new item" he maintained, "So I would think the commission can lay it aside and not enter it into the deliberations and still have the facts before them."

Mrs. Cruchett concurred,

"I believe Mr. Stutzman is correct. This doesn't change anything. It still leaves us at the introduction to the committee report when it says 'All the problems have been solved, except transportation, water and sewage.'

There was little discussion on the plan itself after county counsel reminded the commission that it couldn't table a letter already read, saying it remained a piece of evidence for each commissioner to consider on its merits and in light of all other evidence.

Tempers flared again when Mrs. Evans asked Witt from the department of health to respond to questions about the letter.

Etienne competed with catcalls from the audience and the sound of a banging gavel when he attempted to raise a point of order prior to Witt's testimony. Mrs. Evans was as insistent as Etienne when she told him his point of order would be considered after Witt spoke.

"The point Etienne wished to make involved the time span the health department was dealing with in considering the conditions."

After a brief comment by Dr. Marcucci in favor of the project, Stutzman addressed his fellow commissioners about a change of heart he had about the project.

"Until the last hearing on the plan, I had thought this was the most thoroughly thought-out plan I had seen in my years of experience on the planning commission," he began.

"But in the last two weeks, I have given a great deal of thought to the subcommittee report, and particularly Eleanor Taylor's minority report," he continued.

"I will cast my vote not against the project because of any defects in the plan, but as a matter of timing. Prematurity is a consideration in this matter," he concluded. "Perhaps there should be a third vote, aye, nay, and some time."

Before a roll call vote, Al Eisner, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association but speaking as an individual in this instance, rose to another point of order to question the eligibility of Dr. Marcucci to vote in the decision.

"I believe, and it is the belief of many people in Monterey County, that Dr. Marcucci should not vote in this matter because a successor has been named to his chair," Eisner said.

He warned against the complicated situation, noting a recent incident in Placer County when a city body had both the old and new appointees seated.

County counsel repeated the opinion rendered last week when Dr. Marcucci's eligibility to vote on the lower Carmel Valley master plan amendment was questioned.

Counsel's opinion is that an appointee serves until his successor becomes eligible. Because Dr. Marcucci's successor was appointed on May 4 and, under the Moscone Act, had to file a statement of economic interest 10 days before he becomes eligible to vote, Dr. Marcucci was entitled to cast a vote on the matter before the commission.

Dr. Marcucci moved and Bengard seconded that the commission recommend approval of the plan to the board of supervisors. When that vote tied, Stutzman moved and Cruchett seconded that the plan be denied on the basis of prematurity.

The vote tied a second time, and county counsel ruled the plan goes to the board with no recommendation from the commission. Five affirmative votes are required to approve a specific plan.

News Briefs

BACH FESTIVAL HOUSING NEEDED

Carmel residents, especially those living within walking distance of Sunset Center, whose guest rooms will be unoccupied during the month of July, and who would be willing to offer use to one or two Bach Festival musicians, are asked to call the Festival office, 624-1521.

The Festival is in acute need of housing from early July until Aug. 2. Approximately 85 Festival participants will be here during this time period for rehearsals and the Festival itself. In addition to helping the Festival, this house-sharing can be a rewarding experience for residents, according to Bach Festival office director Val Miller.

JAZZ FESTIVAL AUDITIONS

Auditions for Monterey Jazz Festival Music Scholarships at Monterey Peninsula College will be held on Friday May 21, as announced by Donald Schamber, chairman of the MPC Music Department.

Applicants should come to the MPC Music Hall at 3 p.m. where they will be expected to play a written solo for their instrument. They should provide their own accompanists if needed.

Full-year scholarships up to $500, partial scholarships and grants-in-aid are available through funds provided by the Monterey Jazz Festival. More information and applications for the auditions may be obtained by contacting Schamber at 649-1150, ext. 296.

CARMEL CONVALESCENT SEEKS RUMMAGE

Rummage donations for the Carmel Convalescent Hospital Patio Sale are being sought. Donations of clothing, housewares, plants, books, toys, records, linens or shoes are needed. Coathangers and paper bags will also be accepted. The sale will be held June 5 and proceeds are to be used for the Patient Activity Fund. Donations may be taken to the hospital on Highway One and Valley Way.

NATIONAL VOLUNTEER WEEK

The week of May 16-22 has been proclaimed as National Volunteer Week. Once again Volunteers In Action of the Monterey Peninsula will have its annual Community Service Recognition Ceremony honoring the men, women and youth who have contributed more than 59,152 hours of community work. In addition to awards to be presented to the 36 volunteers, representing 23 non-profit organizations, three special awards will be given. These special awards, the Carnation Company's Community Service Awards, will be presented by the Volunteers in Action. The ceremony will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday (May 19) at the Monterey U.S.O. A social hour will follow.

Water use up 25%

By LESLIE JOHNSON

Water consumption on the Monterey Peninsula is up 25 percent over last year and pumping of wells in the Carmel Valley 75 percent over that of the driest year on record, according to Dick Sullivan, vice-president of California American Water Company.

Although the Los Padres and San Clemente reservoirs are at 92 percent capacity, Sullivan warned, "If there's not another rain soon, we could need to ration this year." He was addressing the monthly meeting of the Zone 11 water advisory committee.

Sullivan said the company was drawing on Valley supplies earlier this year than most in order to avoid pulling water from the reservoirs until later in the year. In a normal rain year, he said, wells in the Valley wouldn't be extensively tapped until June or July, because the dams would be spilling and water would be pulled from reservoirs.

He told Zone 11 refill of storage had been making a net daily gain, although that rate had been dropping. While they had been gaining about .15 feet per day, the 24 hour period prior to the meeting showed a gain of only .05 feet.

Water consumption for the first quarter of 1976 is 4,759, up almost 26 percent from 1975's first quarter consumption of 3,780.5, and up almost three percent from 1972's first quarter of 4,633.6, Sullivan said.

"The difference between 1972 (the driest year on record) and 1976 is that in 1972 the two dams were spilling in late June, but neither has spilled in this water year for several months," Sullivan said.

Because the company has delayed drawing from storage, they are extracting more from Carmel Valley wells, including the Begonia well, without benefit of desirable iron removal, Sullivan said.

Thus far, the company has produced 1,390.7 acre feet from its Carmel Valley sources, nearly 2.5 times production during the first quarter of 1975, and 73 percent higher than production during the same period of 1972.

Noting eight complaints from Carmel in the past week, Sullivan said the company anticipates increased red water complaints. "This year, about all we can tell them is they have a choice between that and no water at all," he said.

Urging voluntary water conservation, Sullivan warned water rationing was a very real possibility before the end of the year.

Monterey representative Leo McIntyre suggested Cal-Am make a correlation between rainfall, increased production and any increase in treated wastewater output in order to determine if water is "being run down the drain or spread over lawns," to provide the PUC with an indication of the rate of success of various conservation education programs.

Sullivan said Tuesday the increased production from Valley wells should not be considered "alarming," noting well production would level off during the year after the company begins to draw more from their reservoirs.

In other action, the committee heard a report from Frank Langham, coordinator for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency, who had attended a meeting May 5 in San Francisco with the PUC in preparation for hearings in Seaside beginning May 24.

"First, I'm pessimistic about any possibility of the ban on new connections being lifted in May," Langham began.

"Second, I believe there are some considerations being made by the PUC that distress cases should be examined one by one, especially legal lots of record," he said.

"Third, their attitude seems to be one of improved cooperation in seeing our crises of economy and water supply," he said. "I think they are attempting more readily than in the past to see our local position."

Langham said he thought PUC staff members were favorably impressed with the efforts of the joint powers agency toward water conservation and education programs and the examination of long-term solutions to the water supply problem.

Several study sessions have been arranged by subcommittees of the agency to prepare for the hearings, Langham said, noting that individual formal complaints about the ban would not be heard by Parke Boney Steele, the hearing officer.

Langham outlined various points agency members would cover in presentations, saying he believed the most important point for Sanitary district...

is to halt future hook-ups until the district can take care of the load it already has.

For these reasons, the district is currently considering the possibility of imposing a sewer hook-up moratorium, and a decision could be made on the issue at the June meeting.

The district's plant, completed in 1972, is basically designed to handle 4 MGD of sewage, but the entire plant (because of deletions made at the time of construction) is not rated the same. The primary system, which takes out most of the impurities in the incoming sewage and puts out effluent ranging from 85 to 95 percent clean, can handle in the neighborhood of 2.4 MGD.

But the anaerobic digestion system, which reduces the solid material into heavy sludge, is the plant's bottleneck.

No matter how efficient a plant is, it always ends up with sludge which must be hauled away. But the poorer the plant operation or capacity, the wetter the sludge and the harder it is to dispose of.

Ideally, Carmel's plant aims to place sludge in its anaerobic digesters for 30 days and then put the thick, relatively odorless and bacterialess sludge out into sand drying beds. Once the sludge dries, it may be scraped up and trucked to Marina by the district's dump truck.

But rainy seasons or summer fogs slow down this drying process and, more and more lately, the large amounts of sludge have required the hiring of a tank truck to pump the still liquid sludge out of the drying beds at $70 a load plus dumping fees.

A district-owned tank truck would help the situation, as would the other digester and sludge thickener requested by the district. A secondary clarifier is also being requested to aid in cleaning up the effluent going out into the bay.

But all of this $1.3 million request is still in midair, thanks to the Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS) designation for Carmel Bay.

As part of the ASBS order, the district is required to produce an overall area-wide facilities plan to meet the future needs of the Carmel-Carmel Valley basin. The plan, due in 1978, will detail future facilities, and the state is reluctant to make grants for facilities before that master-plan is compiled.

Meanwhile, however, the district's sewage volume — and consequently, their problems — continue to increase.

At its May meeting, the board sent a letter to the Monterey County Planning Commission explaining the plant's limitations and the possibility that the district might not be able to handle future projects approved by the county.

Also sent was a strong letter to the state asking that the requested digester be approved with all due speed.

Reports being drawn up by the district's attorney and engineer will be presented in June to the board, assessing the need and mechanics of a sewer hook-up moratorium.

Sacramento trio captures chamber society award

BY
IRVING W. GREENBERG

The fifth annual chamber music auditions of the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula were held last Saturday afternoon at Sunset Center in Carmel, in order to select the two prize winners, who, in addition to a public recital the next day, Sunday afternoon, would receive $1,000 in cash as the first prize and $500 in cash as the second prize.

Four participating chamber music ensembles involving young people from the Universities of California participated in the contest. These were: The Cantrell, Marsnick, Foy Trio from California State University at Northridge; The U.S.C. Woodwind Quintet; the Sinfonia Brass Quintet from the U.S.C.; and the California State University, Sacramento, Trio.

The judges were the following: Judge Coordinator William Corbett Jones, pianist; Eugene Gravotovich, Assistant Professor at San Francisco State University; Anne Crowden, on the Faculty of Stanford and Sonoma State Colleges; Haymo Taeuber, musical director of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra; and Leslie Schivo, retired, formerly wind player with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

After much deliberation, the first prize of $1,000 was awarded to the California State University, Sacramento, Trio (Sondra Simoni, violin; Elizabeth Anderson, cello; and Dana Lee, pianist); the second prize of $500 was given to the Sinfonia Brass Quintet of the U.S.C. (Mark Larsen, trumpet; Rick Todd, horn; Anthony Myatt, tuba; Larry Zalkind, trombone; and Robert Santomieri, trumpet).

Preceding the public recital Sunday afternoon, a short business meeting was held, the prizes were personally awarded by Bruce Grimes, and then the concert proceeded. The California State University, Sacramento, Trio, the first prize winner, performed in its entirety the four movements of the Johannes Brahms Piano Trio in B major, Op. 8. This trio, consisting of three young girls, aged 15, 16 and 17, gave a performance that embodied a somewhat relaxed approach, with an elegant exposition that had verve, vibrancy, and interpretive perception. In the opening Allegro, with its exceptionally long and lyrical melody, the musical pronouncement was dominated by the excellent phrasing, intonation, and dynamics of the pianist, in a viable and balanced rapport with the two strings. The changes in the time element, with alternations, successions, and combinations, in the three instruments exposed in a most expressive manner the rhapsodic, and impassioned utterance. The tempi were excellent with an aura of graceful and melodic figuration; a tonal luxuriance, and a modulating insight.

The fairy-like delicacy of the Scherzo opening, broken by a martial figure, was asserted with an emphatic tonality, and with a significant harmonic statement. The subtle integration of the trio as a counter-melody of the violin against the left-hand chordal assertion by the pianist, resulted in finely-delineated musical contours. In the Adagio, the sombre dialogue between the piano and the strings, leading into a long, passionate melody for the solo cello, was highly poignantly expressive with deep motivation, the cello scoring particularly high here. She exhibited a magnificent, warm, lyric sustenance, and a luxurious, rich tone. Also, the piano playing was particularly eloquent, with an equally responsive accompaniment by the strings. The delicate meanderings of this musical conversation was most effective, particularly in the high register in the pianist's right hand. The passionate finale, with the opening theme in the warm and lyrical cello statement, with the rippling piano accompaniment, set the potential to the accelerated momentum of tempestuous intensity. The compelling finality was brilliantly displayed by the glittering octaves of the piano. The movement ended in a long coda, which was pronounced with power, vitality, and exuberance.

The second prize winner, the Sinfonia Brass Quintet from U.S.C., performed first the Eugene Bozza Sonatine. Bozza is a contemporary Italian composer having been born in 1905. This work, in four short movements, is a gaily roguish sort of music. In the opening Allegro, redolent with vitality and a quickly-flowing lyric line, there was established in responsive echoes by the trumpets on the one hand and the tuba and the trombone on the other hand, a dialogue of interesting variety. In the Andante, the peroration of the tuba, with the other four brass instruments, there was exhibited a balance of tonal weight, thus giving this movement its unusual interest.

In the Allegro vivo, with the melodic line carried by all the instruments, the tuba accentuating the nervous tonality, and at times escaping into a certain lyric mobility. In the Finale, sardonic and satirical in content, there is a definite Wagnerian strain in the opening theme by the tuba. The other instruments, replying in a colloquy of assenting sounds, gave this movement its propulsive and pulsative nature. This work has a definite interest, and a most unusual viability for the listener.

The Victor Ewald Quintet in B minor, Op. 5, is a work of a transplanted Scandinavian to Russia. It was written in 1911, and it is redolent with melodic strains of Tchaikovsky, Arensky, and, even, Stravinsky. Its writing is clearly intended to produce charming sound, though with not very much polyphonic art, and its technical rendition is not a very difficult operation. In the opening Moderato, full of quasi-melodic elements of accelerated momentum, it was carried out beautifully and competently by the trumpets in unison, with the thematic material being musically almost in variation form. In the highly melodic, sentimental and nostalgic Adagio, all instruments were balanced beautifully against and with one another. Here again, the tuba introduced the lyric line, with the other instruments adding to its statement in a succession of subtleties, around the tuba's main delineation. This movement was played with a real sense of variety.

In the final Allegro, the thematic material reverts back in substance to some aspects of Stravinsky. By the tuba's basic character of exposition, the other four instruments were held in a sort of subjective character, particularly in their resonant and reverberatory elements. This aspect was accomplished with exceptional technical skill and with a plethora of deliberate sound effects.

As an encore, the group played an old America folk-tune "The Little Brown Jug," with the variations on same written by Irving Rosenthal, thus leaving the audience in a most amused and pleasant state of mind.

The audition was another proof of the great amount of musical talent that is potentially available in the schools and universities of the state, which talent must be helped to express itself, by just such awards as these.

Students to do

Scenes from productions ranging from Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" to a contemporary musical review, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," will be presented by Monterey Peninsula College drama students Monday May 24 and Tuesday May 25 in the MPC Theatre. Admission is free.

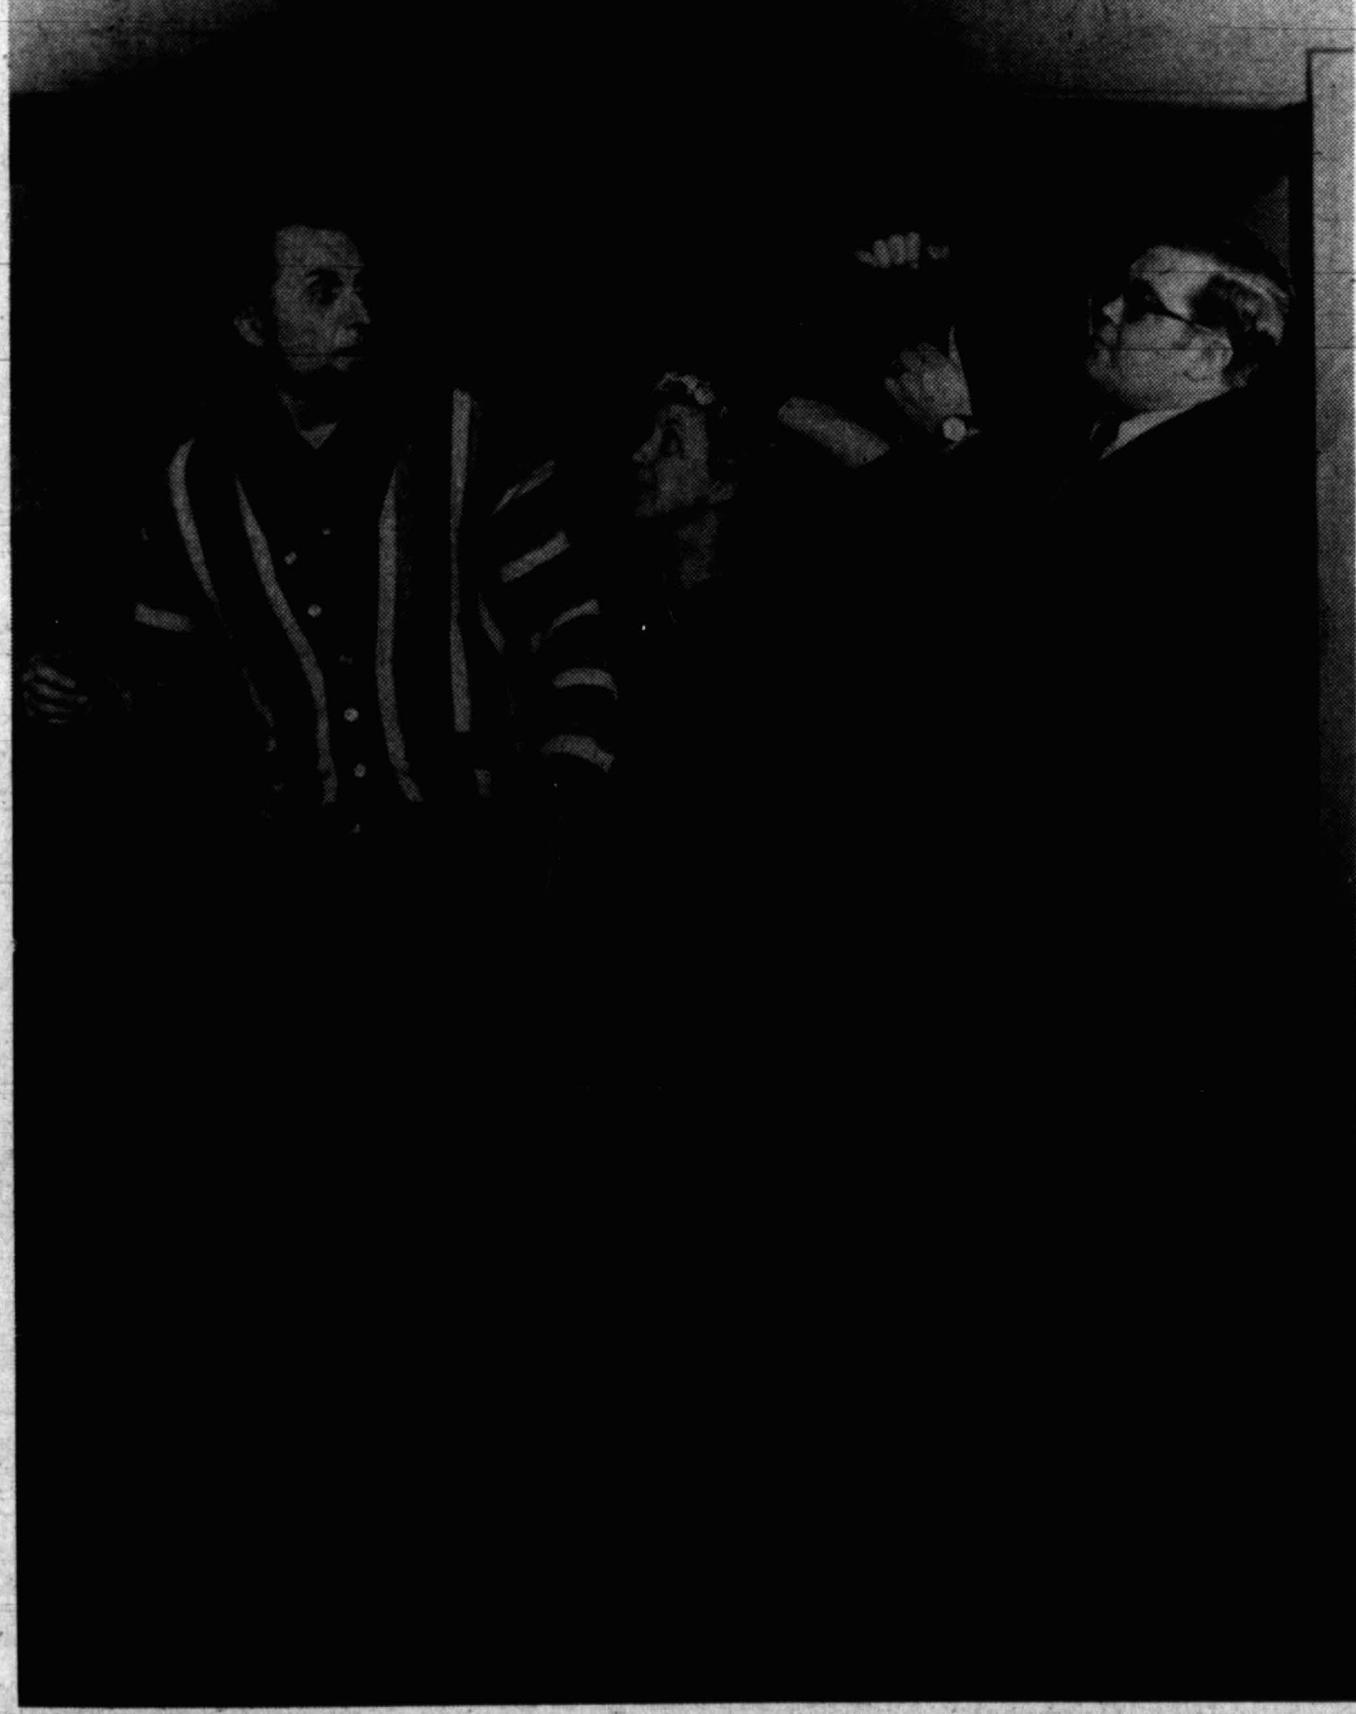

The presentations are part of the course work for beginning, intermediate and advanced acting and directing students at the college. Curtain time is 7 p.m. both nights in the MPC Theatre. Admission is free.

Tuesday's presentations are "Forty Carats," "High School Madness," "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," "Midsummer Night's Dream," and "Cave Cats."

"WHAT'S THE MATTER with this old hen?" demands drunken novelist Biff Lancing (William Lewis) as Mary Schmidt and Steve Dirk watch in "The Clackett House," an original mystery by Marcia Hovick. The show is being presented by the Staff Players Friday-Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at the Forest-Theatre-in-the-Group through May 30. For information or reservations call 624-1531.

'1776' set in Monterey

History — comically exciting history set to music — will take over the stage when the Continental Theatre Company presents "1776" on Thursday, May 27 at King Hall, Monterey Naval Postgraduate School with curtain time at 8 p.m.

The song and dance musical about the events leading up to the signing of the Declaration of Independence walked away with both the Tony Award and the New York Drama Critics' Award as the best musical of its first season on Broadway.

"1776" is a jocular, lyrical version of what happened during the hot weeks of debate in Philadelphia before the Continental Congress was chivied into passing the Declaration of Independence. No one would suppose that a gaily exciting musical entertainment could be made out of the solemn historical event that gave birth to the American nation. But the show presents Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and other great Founding Fathers in slightly spoofing terms. It makes no attempt to romanticize these men, however, and shows them to be highly fallible, quarrelsome and sometimes a pig-headed group of delegates.

The tale of what led up to the jubilant pealing of the Liberty Bell, which every person thinks he knows, is retold in song and dance terms beginning with that swelteringly hot day in May, 1776, when the deliberations of the leaders from the thirteen colonies came to a paralyzed standstill. "1776" offers a retelling of the story.

"1776" is being sponsored locally by the Monterey American Revolution Bicentennial Committee, Monterey Peninsula College Community Services and City of Monterey's Parks and Recreation Department. All tickets are $2 and are available at Abinante's, Lily Walker's Records in Pacific Grove, the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey Peninsula College Community Services and Monterey Peninsula Kiwanis.

Sunset Views:

By FRANK H. RILEY
Director, SCCC

I guess you could say that "the Season" has come to a close at Sunset Center. That is to say, all of the various sponsored series — The Monterey County Symphony series, the Carmel Music Society series, the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society series, the Explorama travel-adventure series, and the Carmel Festival of Dance series — all of these have concluded their programs for the 1975-76 season. And what a season it has been. It seems that each year every one of these sponsored series comes up with a program that is even better than the one before. The excellence and the variety of the programs offered in the Sunset Center Theatre are virtually unsurpassed anywhere. It is true that in some of the large entertainment complexes it is possible to see some super productions which require special stage facilities; but for all-round quality and critical acceptance, there are few United States halls that surpass our own community center theatre. Having said that, I suppose that is the opening for someone to say, "OK, what do you do for an encore?" How, just to say the 1975-76 season is ended is not to say that your community and cultural center closes down. Far from it. July brings the world-famous Bach Festival to Carmel with its two full weeks of concerts, lectures, and recitals. It brings back the Forest Theater Guild with a more ambitious program than ever with performances beginning on July 1 and continuing every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday through Labor Day and presenting not one but two Shakespearian productions alternating weekly between "Macbeth" and "Comedy of Errors" at the famous and historic outdoor Forest Theater. And that's not all, for on every Sunday afternoon in July and August at 2 p.m., your City presents a free program at the Forest Theater. Everything — music, drama, dance — is included in the varied program. Also, during the summer, exhibits continue in the Marjorie Evans Gallery changing approximately once a month and bringing to the City outstanding exhibits from such sources as the Smithsonian Institution and Western Association of Art Museums. Don't forget, either, the plays and musicals presented through the summer by the Community Theatre in its Room No. 20 theatre on the Mission Street side of the Center just South of 8th Avenue. Oh no — there will be no shortage of activities and events for the summer.

And while all this goes on for your enjoyment and edification, behind the scenes all of those series people we mentioned earlier are finishing up plans and bookings, and brochures, and tickets sales for the soon-to-be-here 1976-77 season. We have some plans for unusual film programs. We will try to revive the brown-bag picnic on the patio program. Our dance festival is almost ready to announce.

I have said a lot about how much is available; but even more important, people are patronizing them. In the past 12 months, more than 80,000 attendees have been recorded at Sunset Center. There is still room for more, however; and we hope that you who are not yet "hooked" become so soon.

Free concerts set

Monterey Peninsula College's Chorus and Brass Ensemble will give separate final concerts of the spring semester on Sunday evening May 23.

The Brass Ensemble will play in Carmel Mission Basilica at 8 p.m. The MPC Chorus will perform at 8:15 p.m. in the new Sister Mary Carlotta Performing Arts Center on the Santa Catalina School campus. Both concerts are free.

Dr. Henry Smith, director of the Brass Ensemble, said the program will include "Chorale and March" by Beethoven; "Overture to Berenice," by Handel; "Six Pieces" by Pezel, "Tower Music" by Drakeford and "Symphony for Brass Choir" by Ewald.

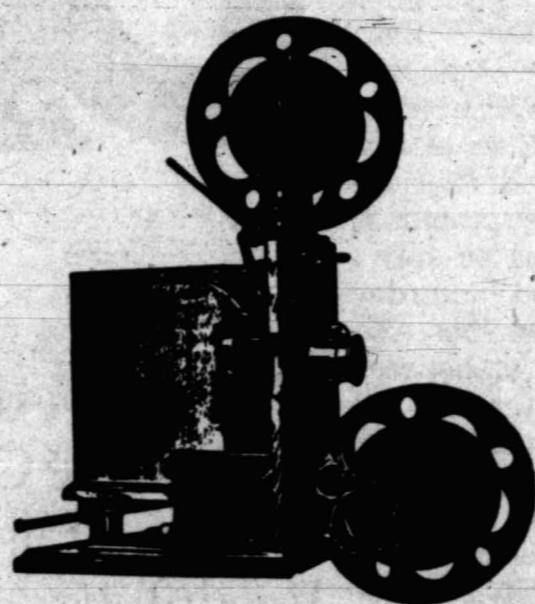

Members of the ensemble are Steve Wilson and Craig Jardstrom, trombone; James Mattos, French horn; Patrick Kercheval and Tim Ragan, trumpet, and Dr. Smith, tuba.

The MPC Chorus is directed by Dr. Harvey

Marshall. The program includes "And I Will Exalt Him" by Handel, "You Fill My Heart" by Brahms, "Lay Yo' Head in de Winduh, Jesus" and "Who Will Be a Witness for My Lord," arranged by Jester Hairston, and "Notes From Tom Paine" by Norman Oello Jojo, a piece commissioned for the Bicentennial by the J.C. Penney Company.

The "Agnus Dei" from the 16th Mass of Haydn will feature Susan Boland, soprano; Debbie Rye, contralto, Steve Emlaw, tenor, and Edward Blackwell, bass. The Chorus' rendition of the "Te Deum" by William Latham will be accompanied by Camille Olaeta at the piano and Rick Peirce, Joy Carpenter and Don Barbarie on percussion.

Mrs. Olaeta, who is the Chorus' accompanist, and Dorothy Heer, also will be heard as a duo piano team on the program. They will play Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance," Op. 46, No. 6 and "Sonata," for four hands at the piano by Francis Poulenc.

EXCLUSIVE! EXCLUSIVE! Look for production to start early this summer in Carmel on the filming of Brian Moore's interesting novel "The Great Victorian Collection."

Moore's work, which was released last fall and soon will be on the paperback racks, deals with an art dealer named Anthony Maloney who stays overnight in Carmel, dreams about specific art objects from the Victorian era and wakes up the next morning to find those specific collectables outside his front window.

How's that for an offbeat script?

Sidney Glazier will produce the film and Robert Altman will direct.

Speaking of flicks, last Wednesday was a momentous occasion on the local theatre circuit when a new film was released in Monterey before hitting the San Francisco-San Jose route.

"Banjonian" — a musical tribute to country artist Earl Scruggs — was released at the Valley Theatre as well as the Aptos Twin and the Globe in Salinas.

The producers — Michael Varhol and Richard Abrams — had devised a sound system with the Sensaround concept and decided to personally supervise the installation of the equipment in all three theatres. The sixteen track master using a fourth generation sound away from the master was devised to give the best three track stereo reproduction for a theatre since "Woodstock" was released in the late sixties.

Wouldn't it be great if such care was given to every musical film that's released these days?

Joe Regelski

By the way, this year's judges for the high school competition are percussionist Ralph Humphrey, pianist Pat Williams, Bassist Ray Drummond, Mundell Lowe on guitar, Ashley Alexander on trombone, saxophonist Benny Golson and trumpeter Bobby Shew.

This great lineup of jazz artists will give a free concert on May 28 at 7 p.m.

Starting this week the Warehouse on Cannery Row will be featuring male waiters to compliment the cocktail waitresses. Yes, there'll be no more walking over to the cooks to pick up your pizza and spaghetti.

In addition, the menu has been greatly increased to include approximately twenty-five items of the Italian cuisine. The entertainment remains the same with the dynamic Ms. Barbara Kelly putting on three shows each Friday and Saturday backed up by the ragtime Warehousemen.

Look for Bob Langford and Jon Zobler to be returning to the local folk circuit very soon. "We're just working on our repertoire now, cutting out some old standards and trying to throw in some more of our own compositions," explained Bob.

'Damn Yankees' ends this weekend

The Monterey Peninsula College Players will give their final performances of the Broadway hit musical, "Damn Yankees," Thursday through Saturday (May 20, 21, 22) on the stage of the MPC Theatre. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. for all performances.

"Heart" and "Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets" are among the songs from the production which is the story of a middle-aged Washington Senators fan who "sells his soul" to be transformed into the world's greatest baseball player able to win the pennant for his favorite team.

The MPC production is directed by Morgan Stock. Cast in leading roles are Doug Rosskilly, Sally Burns, Michael C. King, Paula Dula and Jeannine LeMay.

General admission tickets are $2.50. Reservations may be made by calling the MPC Theatre box office at 375-0455 after 5 p.m. on performance night.

Film set Saturday

"The Best Years of Our Lives," a 1946 film that won nine Oscars and numerous international awards, will be shown Saturday May 22 at the Monterey Peninsula College Film Gallery.

It will be presented at 7:30 p.m. in the MPC Music Hall and will run 170 minutes.

"The Best Years of Our Lives" portrays the problems of veterans returning from the war, centering around the frustrations and adjustments experienced by three servicemen. Starring in the film are Frederic March, Myrna Loy, Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright and Virginia Mayo.

Admission is $1 for adults and children and 50 cents for ASMPC card holders. Gold Card holders will be admitted without charge.

GERTRUDE CHAPPELL, surrounded by Ernest Zeppe, Keith Decker and Roy Baxter, watches in astonishment as the band marches around the cookhouse for the third time in Roger Milner's laugh-packed comedy hit, "How's the World Treating You?" now playing Thursdays through Sundays until June 5 at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant. For information and reservations phone 624-1661.

message is simply that "we live by love alone," and it is one of Mozart's tenderest creations. Beethoven had also previously turned to the "Magic Flute" for his twelve variations in F major on "Ein Maedchen oder Weibchen." That melody comes from the opera's second act, in which Papageno sings that his sweetheart will fill his life with happiness.

The cello-piano duo of Jacqueline du Pre and Daniel Barnboim, each an outstanding virtuoso on their particular instrument, combine their artistry to give a superb and glowing reading of these cello sonatas and variations. They display an uncommon rapport, with spirit, clarity, emotional evaluation, and interpretive mastery of a most compelling sort. Their unanimity, their expressiveness, their flexibility, as well as their expansive limpidity and brilliance of evocation marks this set as a most remarkable exhibition of exuberance, vibrancy, and tonal coloration.

These performances were recorded at the Edinburgh Festival of 1970, previous to Miss du Pre's serious illness that seems to have incapacitated her to the point of terminating a most assured and promising career as a cello virtuoso.

The tone quality of the piano is brilliant and sonorous, while the cello is luxurious, and well-balanced.

Although competing in an already over-crowded field of recordings of these works by the finest artists, including the legendary Casals, this set still deserves acquisition by the collector, as an example of playing of the most intimate nature by this husband-wife duo, which, alas, will not be repeated again.

J.S. BACH: THE TWO VIOLIN CONCERTOS IN A MINOR AND E MAJOR; THE DOUBLE CONCERTO IN D MINOR (Yehudi Menuhin, violinist in the solo concertos; and Yehudi Menuhin and Christian Ferras in the Double Concerto — The Menuhin Festival Orchestra and the Robert Masters Chamber Orchestra, both conducted by Yehudi Menuhin — Seraphim S-60258).

The Violin Concerto in A minor begins with a vivacious twenty-four bar theme in the orchestra made up of two sections, each with a self-sufficient motif; the first part appears and reappears throughout the movement in counterpoint to the solo instrument. The second movement is a flowing melody against a persistent ground bass, to which the solo instrument provides decorations. In the finale, we see the composer's skill at contrapuntal writing, with the opening orchestral passage presenting the main theme fugally.

The Violin Concerto in E major is a work of such exuberance that it has been described as "full of an unconquerable joy of life." The basis of the first movement is the three sharply accented quarter notes with which it opens; midway in the movement the solo instrument spins an eloquent melody. The slow movement is a freely treated chaconne, its main subject presented immediately in the bass while over it soars a melody of compelling beauty. A virile subject for orchestra heard at the opening of the finale sets into motion a momentum that continues throughout the movement.

The Double Concerto in D minor is one of the composer's most sublime works in the concerto form. In the first movement, the two solo instruments share a bold three-bar subject, treated fugally. A second subject is then used contrapuntally to this initial idea. The slow movement is music of radiant beauty in which, once again, the melody is treated canonically by the two instruments. The concerto ends dynamically with a forceful statement shared fugally by the two solo instruments, but midway a contrast is provided by a haunting melody first heard in the first violin. This budget Seraphim release by Angel shows Yehudi Menuhin at the zenith of his violinistic prowess — in his sensitive approach, his exquisite long bow line, his unusually accurate fingering, and his magnificent glissandi, trills, runs, arpeggi, and other facets of his technical virtuosity.

He brings to these concerti an abundance of temperamental characteristics that distinguished him as one of the foremost violin interpreters. There is a restrained maturity and a shining elegance in his playing that is not only tonally admirable but also ingratiatingly appealing. His rendition is oriented most effectively to both of these concerti, both to him as a musician and to the listener as the audience.

In the Double Concerto, Christian Ferras, a violinist of distinction, supports and coordinates with him, in a rendition that has richness, warmth, and a great deal of expansiveness.

The Menuhin Festival Orchestra, as well as the Robert Masters Chamber Orchestra conducted by Menuhin himself from the violin, give him (in the solo concerti) and them (in the Double Concerto) — brilliant support, responsive to his momentum and accelerated momentum, making this disc a highly desirable one.

Though not having the fire and the drive of the youthful Itzhak Perlman musicianship of refinement, introspection, and meditative poetry that was found in few violinists at any period of their career. In addition, the price differential makes this disc doubly attractive for the record collector.

DVORAK: SYMPHONY NO. 9 ("From the New World") — "Carnival" Overture (San Francisco Symphony Orchestra conducted by Seiji Ozawa — Philips 9500.001)

Where earlier symphonies of Dvorak were unmistakably Slavic, often incorporating melodies and rhythms modeled after folk sources, this work was of American inspiration, even if in many details it can still be identified as the work of a Bohemian. It was written in the U.S. and introduced in New York on Dec. 15, 1893. After a solemn introduction, the main theme of the first movement is suggested by lower strings and horns under violin tremolos. A climactic passage leads to the main section, in which a sharply syncopated subject is pronounced by two horns. A transitional subject in flutes and oboes is followed by a poignant melody for flute that resembles the Negro spiritual, Swing Low, Sweet Chariot. The heart of the slow movement is an elegiac song for English horn against string harmonies. This is one of the composer's most famous melodies, so similar to a Negro spiritual that many long suspected that it was derived from one. The scherzo opens with a brief introduction, followed by a lively idea in flute and oboe, in imitation, answered by a clarinet. A second subject, also in flute and oboe, but over staccato strings, has a gentler personality. There are two different trios in different keys. In the finale, a triumphant subject is sounded by horns and trumpets, with the rest of the orchestra providing a chordal accompaniment. The second theme, in triplets, is introduced by clarinets against tremolo strings. Both subjects are worked out and there are quick recollections of earlier material from the three preceding movements.

This release by the San Francisco Symphony under Seiji Ozawa turns out to be one of the best that he has recorded with this symphony. There is a velvety plushness, a luxuriousness of tone that embodies not only musical poesy, but nostalgic and imaginative imagery. He brings out the basic thematic material centering around the Negro folk tunes, with an uncanny interpretive insight, and with a rare blend of sensitivity and appeal in his beautiful, long lyric line that he elicits from the orchestra, particularly in the musical arabesques of the final movement. Ozawa leads the orchestra with incisiveness, cohesiveness, and with a restrained and meditative brilliance that makes this reading exceptional, suffused as it is with tonal coloration and musical characterization of the most luminous and scintillating type.

The "Carnival" Overture, which finishes the second side of this disc, is a tone poem in the strict sense, and Ozawa brings out its bucolic and rustic atmosphere, with sweeping dynamic effects and with the episodic section in a consistent and highly epitomized manner.

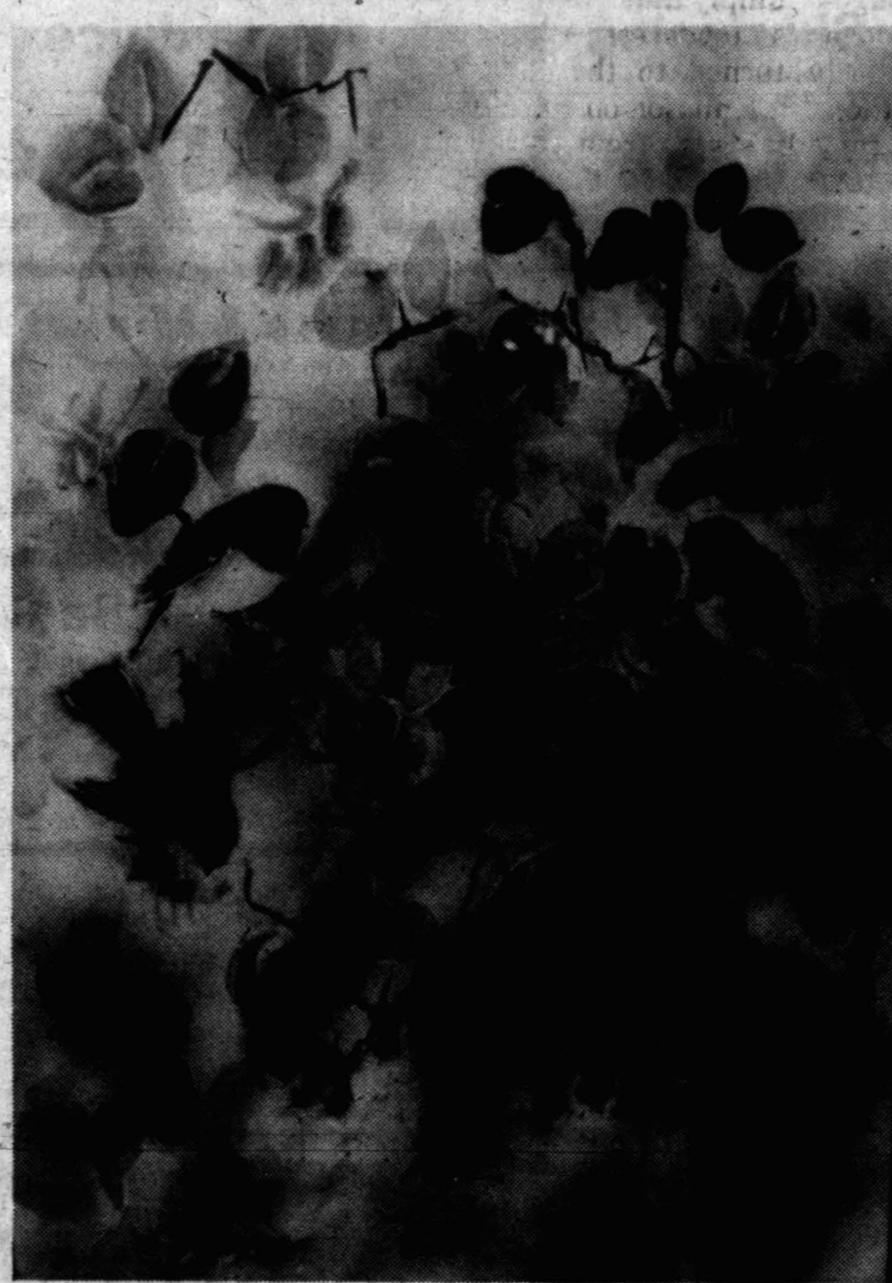

The tonal sound of the orchestra is beautifully rich and sonorous, without any attempt to become over-sentimental and too lush in character. This disc is recommended, in a field of many recordings of this work, as it is a simple, lovable and charming exposition of this work — so different from some of the intensely overpowering renditions of this score.

BEETHOVEN: THE "ARCHDUKE" TRIO — "KAKADU" VARIATIONS (Alfred Cortot, piano; Jacques Thibaud, violin; Pablo Casals, cello — Seraphim 60242).

Beethoven's most celebrated piano trio is the one in B flat major, No. 6. Because of its dedication to Archduke Rudolph, the composer's patron and friend, this work has come to be known as the "Archduke" Trio. The first movement is especially interesting for the nobility of the two main themes, the second somewhat reminiscent of the main subject in the first movement of this composer's Fourth Piano Concerto. The second movement is a delightful Scherzo, one of Beethoven's most infectious pieces in that form. The most impressive movement, however, is the third (andante cantabile), a set of five variations on a melody of religious majesty. A recitative-like coda leads directly into the finale, a sprightly rondo.

The "Kakadu" Variations is the last of Beethoven's piano trios. The subject of these Variations, Op. 121a, is an aria "Ich bin der Schneider Kakadu" (I am the tailor Cockatoo) from Wenzel Mueller's opera "Die Schwestern von Prag" (The Sisters from Prague). A solemn Adagio of some length precedes the initial full statement of the theme. Notable among the variations are No. 1 for piano alone; No. 2 for violin and piano; No. 3 for cello and piano; No. 4 for the trio of the instruments; No. 7 which omits the piano; No. 9, which abandons the Allegretto mood in favor of the Adagio; No. 10, which subjects the theme to a frugal treatment; and No. 11, Beethoven's masterful finale.

"JUNICOS AND FUCIAS" is one of the watercolors by artist Vern Yadon on exhibit at the Carmel Art Association. Yadon is a biologist by profession and serves as the Director of the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. Yadon usually paints wet pigment to a wet surface which adds a unique individuality to each of his paintings. The works may be seen through June 2 at the gallery.

Cortot, Thibaud and Casals, constituted a formidable trio way back in the 1920s, when these works were recorded on 78, and they do indeed show the marks of that era in the surface noise, as well as in the quality of the sound. However, this trio of instrumentalists, by their self-effacement musicianship and in their marvellous rapport with each other and with the score itself, gave a performance of these works that has become a model of interpretation, expressiveness, and tonal coloration.

In spite of the technical deficiencies, this disc is worth owning as an example of the supreme artistry and collaboration of these musicians.

CHS play to open

The Carmel High Pawnshop Players' production of "The Secret Affairs Of Mildred Wild," directed by Diana Hardy, will open on May 27. It will run Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays for two weekends at Carmel High's Pawnshop Theatre. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Central character Mildred Wild, an incurable movie buff, looks to her favorite stars to help her in times of need. In her daydreams, Mildred portrays classic Hollywood roles, including Scarlett O'Hara, Ginger Rogers, Shirley Temple, and even Esther Williams.

Lucy Adams plays the lovable Mildred Wild. Mildred's husband, Roy, is played by Mark Burroughs. Mildred's best friend, the effeminate Carroll, is played by Mark Grauer.

The source of Mildred's near-neurosis is her sister-in-law, Helen, played by Leslie Dunton. Mildred's nymphomaniac landlady, Bertha Gale, is portrayed by senior Wendy Thorpe.

Tickets can be purchased at the door, or reserved through Carmel High, 624-1821 ext. 32.

Municipal Court judgeship a tough battle criticism all part of the job

"A judge that isn't criticized," says Municipal Court Judge Eugene Harrah, "doesn't do anything."

Harrah, who has served as a judge for 14 years, and in private law practice for 29 years before that, claims he has never found a way to make two sides of a court case happy. And he has never known a judge who could.

Nevertheless, Harrah is receiving an unusually large amount of criticism lately as a result of his contested race for reelection and therefore finds the process somewhat "distasteful."

"I'm meeting a lot of wonderful people," Harrah admits, "and I get to talk about myself (which, he says facetiously, is such a big subject he never has enough time to cover it sufficiently), but the race has become a little humiliating."

Harrah is referring to the harsh criticisms leveled against him by opponent David Goyne.

"A sitting judge is not allowed to get into public debate and make accusations," Harrah explains, but the judge's opponent may.

This rule puts Harrah at a disadvantage, since all he can do is defend his record, but Harrah admits it doesn't make much difference because he wouldn't engage in personal recriminations against his opponent even if he were allowed to.

As to any past mistakes he may have made, Harrah says: "I make over 1,000 decisions a year on cases of various kinds. I wish I could've always been right, but I've never known an attorney or judge who was."

Harrah does not, however, feel he has made many mistakes and he defends his record vehemently. Most of the reversals of his decisions made by higher courts were made, Harrah claims, on writs, which are little more than a difference of opinion between two judges.

Although there are parts of the state where civil cases are constantly pushed aside in favor of the more serious criminal cases, Harrah says that, because he is willing to work, both criminal and civil cases come to trial within two weeks.

At the same time, Harrah is not willing to speed up his court procedures by using a negotiated plea system which, he says, robs the judge of his role.

"I'm not going to let someone take over my job," he says.

One of the reasons our courts across the country are so full, Harrah says, is that the courts are not willing to take a firm position and therefore get a lot of repeat offenders.

Harrah says he's seen a firm decision in a minor case of, for instance, shoplifting, put people on the right track. He recalls the late sixties when the public contact in court critical

David Goyne is quick to admit the difficulty of running against an incumbent judge. For one thing, judgeships are rarely contested. For another, drumming up interest in a judgeship campaign can be tough since most voters never intend to end up in a courtroom.

But Goyne, who is trying for the Monterey Municipal Court bench currently occupied by Eugene Harrah, feels that municipal court is where most people come in contact with American justice. Unfortunately, they are not finding that justice, Goyne contends, when they come up in front of Judge Harrah.

"Over the years," Goyne says, "I've heard more people coming out of that court saying: 'Why doesn't somebody do something about that?'"

"That," Goyne describes as Harrah's irascible behaviour and — through a free election — Goyne hopes to remedy an unjust situation.

Goyne backs up his contention that something is wrong in Municipal Courtroom No. 2 by citing numerous tales of Harrah's mistreatment of plaintiffs, defendants and jurors alike.

A simple mix-up in the case of a woman paying a delinquent traffic ticket resulted in a 10-day jail sentence, according to Goyne, when the woman was charged with being rude to Harrah's clerk.

"Judge Harrah's record clearly shows that he is not suited to handle the endless public contacts in the Municipal Court," Goyne says. "His responses to people are far too often unfair, ill-tempered and arbitrary."

Goyne asserts that Harrah literally drives people to lawyers by mistreating them in the courtroom.

"The Municipal Court is where the individual in our society comes for justice," Goyne explains. "When a person appears in this court he is entitled to a fair hearing and must be treated with respect."

Although five and ten day sentences may not seem like much, they are to non-criminals who have never even been in court before.

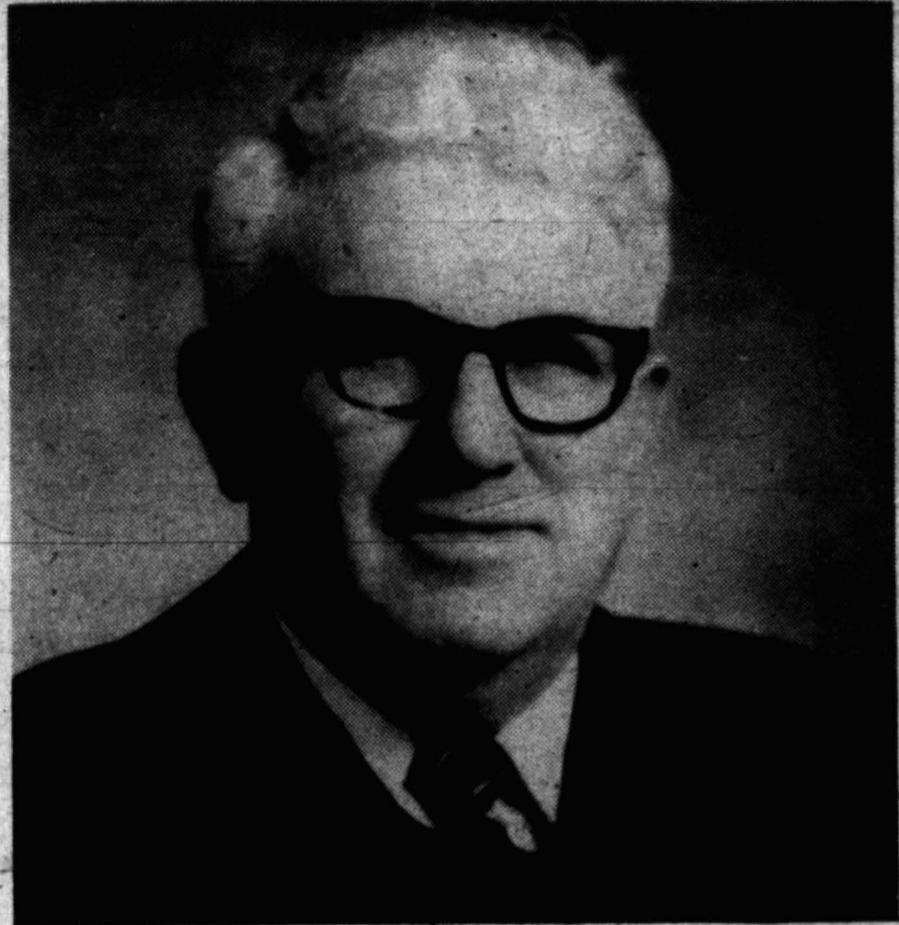

"This is not a little thing," Goyne stresses. He talks about the faith most people have in the system of American justice and compares the surprise of courtroom mistreatment to "catching bubonic plague from the flag."

Goyne says he can still clearly remember, as a child, having been accused of something he didn't do by an uncle. The feeling of being punished unjustly in

Harrah's court, Goyne says, justice is impartial, most of has the same lasting effect. us will never learn the im-

JUDGE EUGENE HARRAH

The 'Poodle-dog' case

An issue which has appeared at the center of the municipal court judgeship race is a 1971 incident commonly known as "The Poodle-dog Case," in which Judge Eugene Harrah sentenced a Pacific Grove woman to five days in jail after she appeared in his court on a charge of having an unlicensed dog.

Harrah's opponent David Goyne has resurrected the incident because he claims it is a well documented example of the kind of injustice that is all too common in Harrah's courtroom. Harrah stands by his decision in the case, feeling the whole thing was overblown.

According to Mrs. Veronica Brokaw, a Pacific Grove policeman ordered her to get her pet poodle "Pepe" licensed on Jan. 2, 1971. Mrs. Brokaw says she had the dog vaccinated and purchased a license at Pacific Grove City Hall on Jan. 4. The officer — Robert J. Lewis — came by the next day to see whether Brokaw had a license.

Although Lewis could not be reached for comment, Brokaw claims she would not let the officer in because he did not have either uniform or identification and was driving an unmarked car.

When Brokaw appeared before Judge Harrah on Jan. 15, according to Brokaw, "Without allowing me to speak this man shouted at me furiously accusing me of being an ignorant woman and arrogant to the animal control officer. Subsequently I was given five days in jail. In a state of shock I asked the bailiff, who was escorting me out of the courtroom, what did I do wrong? His reply was, 'you did nothing wrong Mrs. Brokaw, the judge just doesn't like you.'

Cecilia Wilson, who knew Brokaw before the incident, was in the courtroom at the time and confirms that Harrah yelled at Brokaw, labeling her ignorant and arrogant. Wilson expressed surprise at Harrah's rage.

Brokaw, a naturalized citizen, said: "The time I spent in a concentration camp before immigrating to this country did not leave the emotional scars this horrendous treatment imposed on me by Judge Harrah did."

Harrah, however, says he believes all the laws should be enforced, no matter who the defendant is, and "This woman earned her five days..." he says.

According to Harrah, the animal control officer involved contacted Brokaw about her dog and promised to be back in a week to check the license. When he came back, Brokaw wouldn't come to the door, Harrah says, and when a citation was made out Brokaw wouldn't sign it.

After the officer left to make out a complaint, Brokaw called the sheriff's office saying a strange man had been harrassing her, so a deputy spent almost two hours on her call before discovering it had been the animal control officer.

"When she came into court," Harrah says, speaking about Brokaw, "she was absolutely arrogant."

For that reason, Harrah says, he gave her five days in jail. Harrah also cites the rabies problem which existed in the county at that time.

Friday, May 28 at 5 p.m. is the final deadline for all entries for Visions '76, the amateur black and white photography contest sponsored by the Carmel Pine Cone. Entries may be mailed or hand delivered. All entries must be accompanied by an entry form.

In Carmel entry forms are available at Northern California Savings and Loan, Monterey Savings and Loan, Olde Carmel Stationers, Holiday Inn, Carmel Business Association, Long's photo department and the Pine Cone offices. In Pacific Grove forms are available at Holman's photo department, Monterey Savings and Loan and the Camera Exchange. In Monterey forms can be obtained at Ken's Cameras, Trend Photography, Monterey Savings and Loan and Long's photo department. In Carmel Valley forms are available at Monterey Savings and Loan and Carmel Valley Outlook office. In Seaside forms are available at John Perkins Photo Service and Camera Masters.

Exhibitions of contest winners have been scheduled for Holman's Department Store (June 15-19), Sunset Center (June 21-26), Northern California Savings and Loan in Carmel (June 28-July 2), and the Carmel Valley branch of Monterey Savings (July 5-9). Other dates are being scheduled says Cliff Butler, Pine Cone general manager.

The contest, open to residents of the entire Peninsula, features over $500 in cash and prizes, in six categories. A best of show award will also be given. Each category winner will receive $25 cash and a $25 gift certificate. Second place will receive $15 gift certificates. The sweepstakes winner will receive $100 cash and a $40 gift certificate. Honorable mention certificates will also be awarded.

Winning entries will be published in a special edition of the Carmel Pine Cone on June 15.

Judges for the contest will include Morley Baer, Al Weber, Richard Garrod, Henry Gilpin and George Short.

Entries will be accepted no later than 5 p.m. Friday, May 28 at the Carmel Pine Cone office on Dolores and 8th streets. All entries must be mounted and no larger than 18 inches by 24 inches. Rules and entry form appear on page 8 of this issue. Employees of the Pine Cone or category sponsors are not eligible.

FSA celebrates 30th birthday

The Family Service Agency (FSA) celebrated its 30th birthday by honoring members of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services (MPVS). The party was held in the home of FSA board president Mrs. Arthur Barter.

MPVS contributed the funds to the FSA which enabled them to make the down payment on their present location.

The FSA helps people in all phases of family oriented problems from child abuse to working with the Alliance on Aging, an outreach program for older people at convalescent hospitals.

Preventative counseling on a one to one basis is the role of the FSA, according to director Richard Schmukler. The FSA has a marital enrichment program, and does counseling through the public schools as well as at its office.

Fees are based on financial need, and the staff consists of psychologist Saul Greenberg and three counselors, Nancy Jacob, Joan Spear and Shirley Ward.

The FSA receives funding from the United Fund, and the Crosby Youth Fund as well as MPVS and contributions of time and volunteer services from private citizens. They are located at 1030 Cass St. in Monterey.

MRS. ARTHUR BARTER, president of the Family Service Agency, and Mrs. Loraine Luker, past executive director of the FSA, helped celebrate the agency's 30th birthday.

Performing arts program planned

A performing arts program unique to this area will be offered as part of the Carmel Unified School District summer school session June 17-July 30.

The program, integrating all aspects of theatre from technical production to drama, dance and voice, will be open to all Peninsula residents currently in grades 5-11, according to Marty Krovetz, assistant principal of Carmel High School.

Krovetz appeared before the school board last Wednesday to seek approval for a dual method of funding the program involving both community solicitation and state monies generated by student attendance. He projected an enrollment of 80 students as a desirable level.

Krovetz told the board that Mr. and Mrs. Laurence P. Horan are acting as chairpersons for a committee formed to solicit donations for the program. In addition, he said, funds will be raised by charging admission to productions staged at the end of the program. The total program cost of $8,700 will be funded almost equally by the state, and local donations.

"We feel that Carmel High School is uniquely qualified within our community to offer quality training in the performing arts," says Krovetz.

The program will offer students two-hour classes each morning in drama, dance, voice and technical theatre and two-hour classes in the afternoon for production rehearsals. The program will feature the production of a musical "George M" and a talent show. Both will have multiple performances.

Teaching staff for the program will include Lucretia Butler, Bill Stone, Tina Paradiso and Bob Lester. All have wide backgrounds in the performing arts.

For further information individuals may contact Krovetz at CHS, 624-1821.

BAY AREA ARTIST Shou-Jang Hsieh demonstrates the technique of Chinese brush painting to Alice Tao's Chinese Culture class at the Carmel Foundation. In the technique only one stroke is used to apply the watercolor to the paper. Brushes of every width made from rat whiskers to goat hairs are used in the painting technique.

Bicentennial barbecue recipes

With Memorial weekend soon to arrive, let us think up some unusual Bicentennial barbecue dishes for an outing on the beach. From the start of King William's War of 1812, the French and English wrangled over possession of New York and the North American colonies at Lake Champlain. The Indians fought on both sides and all involved would have relished relaxing by an open fire for an outdoor meal. And so to begin celebrating the 200th anniversary of our country's founding. A few quiet moments with pencil and paper and an examination of the newspaper ads for food and supplies will do away with confusion on barbecue day.

Keep the menu simple and easy to manage. Emphasize the BBQ food, limiting other courses to chilled juices, crisp salads, fruits, cheeses, coffee. Use sturdy plastic-coated dishes or throw-away man-sized plates and napkins, stainless steel cutlery. Use the right kind of fuel. No worry. Hardwood charcoal briquets bring best results. If it rains you can set up the equipment in a breezeway or well ventilated garage. Watch carefully as charcoal uses up oxygen. It would be better to have hors d'oeuvres and nibblers with assorted drinks in the house and even the salads until the squall passes.

Then to Sweet & Sour Spareribs: Sprinkle 4 lbs. lean spareribs, cut into finger-sized pieces, with s&p. Arrange in Dutch oven or heavy skillet. Put onto grill when coals reach right stage. As fat accumulates discard into empty tin can. Make a marinade of brown sugar or molasses; a bit of ketchup, $\frac{1}{4}$ can undiluted frozen orange juice, 2 Tbsp., each wine vinegar and vegetable oil with some finely chopped sauteed onion. Wait until meat has been well doused with the marinade then proceed by placing the Dutch oven on medium coals. Cook uncovered until crisp and tender, basting often with the sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Have plenty of the new sweet corn in local markets. This is one Western way to prepare the young ears. Allow 2 per serving. Strip husks down to end of corn. Do not tear off. Remove silk. Let corn stand in salted ice water one hour, then drain well. Brush with softened butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bring husks up around corn; being sure all kernels are covered. For each ear immerse 4 thicknesses of newspaper in water, soaking it completely and wrapping each ear in the wet paper. Arrange hot briquets for grill barbecuing or use a bed of hot ashes. Nestle the newspaper-wrapped corn among the coals. Barbecue, turning frequently, about 25 min. As newspaper dries out, sprinkle it with more water to prevent burning. Unwrap corn and serve immediately. This same method can be used by using double duty foil. In this case no sprinkling is required.

Hot vegetables are no longer a problem at an outdoor meal. Bake white or sweet potatoes in foil. Even frozen vegetables need no cooking pot. Experts merely unwrap these placing them in squares of double thickness foil. Add a pat of butter, 1 Tbsp. water, seal packet tightly cooking over low coals. Pass salt and pepper at serving. When barbecuing brush grids of grill well with oil to prevent meat from sticking.

Speaking of salads did you know about nasturtium seeds in green salads. If large, cut to mini-size. Minced stems also add zest. Combine with finger torn romaine and Bibb lettuces and a jar of marinated artichoke hearts, sliced, being sure to use the marinade. Cut up water chestnuts for a crunchy texture.

When additional French dressing is needed, pass separately in tightly covered Mason jar this Classic Sauce Vinaigrette: Keep on ice. To 2 Tbsp. wine vinegar add enough salt and Java ground pepper to taste. Stir and add 6 Tbsp. best olive oil beating with silver fork until mixture thickens. If a creamier dressing is desired put an ice cube in the mixing bowl, stirring briefly. Remove ice cube. For variation add chopped fresh herbs of your choice such as basil, chives, for piquancy. Chilled canned baby shrimp, drained and rinsed in cold water is one of our specials.

We also enjoy enhancing broiled or barbecued whole cleaned and scaled fresh fish. Make an uncomplicated wine-butter sauce. Add a squeeze of lemon to equal parts melted butter with dry white wine. Slight pinches of your favorite herb. Heat this in small foil pan brushing often with celery stalk including top. With wide spatula turn fish over carefully on each side until cooked but not overdone. Make an avocado-mayonnaise by mashing a peeled just ripe avocado to which fresh lime or lemon juice is added to avoid discoloration. Combine this with mayonnaise in careful amount to which chopped peeled small tomatoes are added, garlic salt to taste. Serve in lettuce cups garnished with pitted ripe olives. Keep chilled in insulated ice chest. Try to arrange a night when a gorgeous full moon matches the size of a sinking sun at Cypress Point. All the young people were out watching in awe as Carmel Bay reflected the glow. Little fires in the sand.

HARRISON LIBRARY TRUSTEES PLAN BEAUTIFUL STRUCTURE

A beautiful new library building, made possible for Carmel by the funds bequeathed in the will of Mrs. Ella Reid Harrison, which, with interest, will approximate by fall between $23,000 and $24,000, is to be planned and rushed to completion at the earliest practicable date, according to an official announcement of the Trustees of the Library Fund, which was issued to the PINE CONE just before press time this week.

The new library is to be located on the city's property bounded by Ocean Ave., Lincoln St., and Sixth Ave. It is to face Ocean Ave. and run through to Sixth St. on the rear and Lincoln St. on the west side, and will be surrounded by beautiful grounds.

The Trustees of the Library Fund, consisting of George L. Wood, chairman, John B. Jordan, A.K. Miller, H.P. Larouette, and John B. Dennis request the cooperation of Carmel architects and builders in the preparation of plans for the new library. In accordance with this idea, the board desires that tentative plans and sketches be submitted and, as a basis for such plans, the following facts in regard to the building are set forth:

1. The building is to have one floor and basement.
2. The building is to be of some fireproof material.
3. The floor space, first floor 46 x 66 feet.

The trustees reserve the right to reject any and all plans and sketches and is not to be bound in any way for the payment for such as are not accepted — the idea being that the local people will cooperate as much as possible. Such sketches or plans should be in the Trustees' hands within 30 days.

Any information desired may be had from A.P. Fraser, clerk of the Board of Library Trustees, at City Hall.

CARMEL MOURNS PASSING OF FRIEND

On Wednesday May 16, a stately pine in front of Ernie Morehouse's office on Ocean met its untimely end. Death came without preceding illness; a treeman and his crew gently lopped off the top branches before sawing down the trunk.

The tree appeared to be about 50 years old, however the exact age is unknown. Ernest Schweninger, owner of the property on which the tree stood since 1906, says that at that time the tree was approximately six feet tall. It was of natural growth.

Removed to make way for an additional building on the property, the tree is mourned by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances as well as members of its own species, since it has contributed much toward the beauty of the street. According to Miss Elizabeth Niles, librarian, who attended the tree's demise, it had a unique position among its peers. "I think it is the only one standing within a block, not out along the sidewalk," she said.

From its lofty position, the tree has witnessed many a strange sight as its branches grew and spread. In its infancy, it undoubtedly had a wide view; only four years before its birth Frank Devendorf and Frank Powers had started selling lots in Carmel. It saw Schweninger's grocery store built and taken down, the Cinderella Shop move away and Derek Rayne move into the building at its trunk. Later Paul Flanders built beside it the addition which now houses the Morehouse Realty and Insurance office.

The tree will probably be cremated, its logs to burn brightly in some Carmel fireplace. Meanwhile the remains are piled near the sidewalk, on view of the passersby, some of whom are seen to pluck a cone or branch in memory of the departed tree.

NO PROSCENIUM ARCH MEANS NO SUNSET AUDITORIUM

Five of the six Sunset commissioners, sitting in an adjourned budget meeting Monday night, agreed that the issue of tearing down Sunset auditorium would cease to exist if the proscenium arch were to be made smaller or removed to enlarge the forestage, as suggested by a Carmel citizen. Much of the building would collapse of its own accord, since the arch is the supporting member with other supporting steel and trusses dependent on it. The commission moved to "go emphatically on record that we consider this, as we have in the past, an engineering problem and not practical." Commissioner Rear Admiral C.W. Fisher was absent.

Commissioner James Pruitt, presiding as chairman pro-tem called upon Sunset Center Custodian James Dixon to describe the work he and his assistant perform and the need for additional help. After considerable debate, the commission decided to suggest the hiring of another full-time employee in view of the fact that the custodians, at present cannot do all the interior maintenance and find time to care for the landscaping.

New Carmel Businesses

Open since March 15, Olde Carmel Stationers meets a big need for the immediate and surrounding Carmel area. Located in Carmel Center Mall, its easy access makes buying both personal and office stationery supplies much easier than ever before. Owner Peter Chmarney strives to have complete in-stock supplies including office furniture, typewriters, copiers, accounting systems and art supplies. Thus providing the only such business supply outside of Monterey.

Peter and his wife, Jacqueline, pride themselves in "old fashioned service at old fashioned prices". Peter came to the peninsula when he was stationed at the Naval Postgraduate School as a computer programmer. He has also had experience locally as a graphic artist. Jacqueline has been a resident in California for ten years.

When asked why he chose the Carmel Center for a location, Peter replied: "Convenience and Competition!" "This location provides lots of convenience for my customers and no competition for me." Sounds like a happy combination for everyone.

HARROD'S

Lynn Harrod opened her antique shop in the Carmel Center Mall on May third. An outgrowth of years of interest and collecting of antiques, Harrod's introduces many new artforms to the peninsula. A student of the world, Mrs. Harrod was born in Peking while her parents were in the diplomatic corps. The effect of the Chinese culture is obvious in her shop by many beautiful lamps, vases and jade art pieces. For three years Lynn lived in Europe, it was during this time that she became interested and began collecting delftware and pewter. Lynn feels her specialty is flow blue porcelain pieces. A collection started while she lived in Germany, flow blue began as a mistake when the blue pattern ran into the white porcelain of some English dishware. The soft effect became popular and the "mistake" took great skill to reproduce. Now flow blue is scarce and Harrod's has one of the largest collections in northern California.

Harrod's also carries folk art like Rosemaling from Norway, reverse glass painting which originally appeared in the mid-19th century as tinsel painting, and toleware designs by Sara Tiffany as well as Theoreums — a technique of painting on velvet usually incorporating early American patterns.

Starting June 5, Camilla Buehr's water color portraits and water color on linen will be on permanent display at Harrod's, where unusual collectables from around the world are yours to discover.

the agency to communicate is that lifting the ban on legal lots of record would have an insignificant effect on service for existing customers.

Langham also mentioned an "informal study session" held last Friday and attended by over 20 elected and appointed officials to consider the possibility of an expanded water district serving both supply and treatment needs of an enlarged service area.

Although he said he anticipated the issue would not make the November ballot, or perhaps even the ballot in March, Langham said there would be another similar session on May 17.

Zone 11 committee members authorized their chairman Manuel DeMaria to represent them at future meetings.

CLIFF BUTLER, general manager of the Pine Cone, presents a check for $100 on behalf of the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation Inc. to Annah Lee, winner of the western region senior high school division in the foundation's Bicentennial Essay Contest.

Annah Lee wins regionals

Annah Lee, daughter of Col. and Mrs. L.M. Lee has been awarded a $100 prize for winning the regional competition in the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation Inc. Bicentennial Essay Contest.

She won top prize in the high school category among entrants from Nevada, California, Washington and Hawaii. Her essay has been forwarded to the national level. The national winner in the high school division will receive $600.

A senior at Carmel High when she entered the contest, Ms. Lee currently attends Monterey Peninsula College after graduating early from CHS. In April she was awarded $25 for winning the local essay prize in her division.

A relative newcomer to the Peninsula, she has lived in Germany and throughout the south. Her father is a dentist in the army. She has worked on the Carmel High School student newspaper and has had poems published in Poetry Shell. She plans to attend Fresno State in the fall, majoring in journalism.

The Foundation's Bicentennial Essay Contest is being conducted in commemoration of the national Bicentennial. The contest was open to young people in elementary, junior high school and high school divisions in 10 states: Arkansas, California, Hawaii, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Nevada, Oklahoma, Texas and Washington.

Topic for the contest was "What I Would Give America As a Present on Its 200th Birthday and Why?"

Thomas Magowan of All Saints' School and Mary Politzer of Carmel Middle School were local winners in the elementary and junior high school divisions.

Judges for the competition locally were: Frank Lloyd, former newspaper editor and Carmel resident; Robert Whitehead, assistant superintendent for instruction and personnel in the Carmel Unified School District; and, Richard Wilsdon, Carmel attorney and member of the Carmel school board.

The Perfect Gift

BY Annah Lee
Carmel High School
12th Grade

"The United States of America?" queried the Zalthanian. The tiny creature hovered at eye level like a puppet on strings. "Why the very name should tell a being of the perfect gift for your Bicentennial."

I thought it best to consult an outsider on what would be most beneficial to our nation. The translucent Zalthanian agreed to disclose a portion of his latest observations to me. I was supposedly very privileged.

"As you know," he boasted as he darted before my eyes, "my planet is far more advanced than Earth. The sunlight sent a spectrum of color dancing across his opalescent skin. "I've been observing your country for the past ten years and plan to submit my findings to the Universal Library of Zalthania. Using some selections from the time bank, I think I can illustrate my suggestion for your country's Bicentennial gift." With a wave of his webbed hand he produced a screen, an oblong gadget with minute dials and buttons. "You must see for yourself. Now watch the infinitum viewer carefully." As he adjusted the machine I incrediblly gazed into the past decade.

When the screen focused I was startled by the sight of thousands of people marching up and down the streets of a large city. Their expressions conveyed anger and frustration. They were largely young people, all chanting and burning small cards. An uncontrolled outburst erupted when the men in blue came forward and some of the screaming protesters were taken away. A very important looking man kept saying, "We will not forget our committment." Yet the mob seemed to disagree.

"That," said the Zalthanian, now flitting about like a large hummingbird, "is one of many anti-war protests. I could show you all of them if you like, but I would rather think you are intelligent enough to understand your own people."

I spun around trying to follow the little being's movement. "You are still puzzled!" he marvelled. "Perhaps I could better define my idea with another example." Adjusting the gadgets again, he focuses the screen on another mob of people. They were noticeably different in that they were of all ages, and mainly black. Some were singing a very slow yet hopeful tune and some were angry. Again the screen refocused to a crowd of people with white sheets covering their heads and bodies. One man said he didn't want blacks in his neighborhood or his children's schools. Only his words were terrifying for they were angry and violent. I looked around for the little creature. I was confused, but I didn't want him to think me stupid. "Civil Rights," he stated and settled on the viewer.

With that a small apartment appeared on the screen. A young man walked in and angrily questioned his wife as to when his dinner would be served. The woman turned to him and in tears said that she was tired of being a slave of the house. She informed him that she would seek a job and demand equal pay. The man stared at her in disbelief. He raised his fist in the air and pounded it upon the table. "Enough," the little being quivered, "Women's Liberation. Do you get the picture? Ha! I thought I'd add a bit of colloquial English!" I sat in silence so as not to answer incorrectly.

The Zalthanian became frustrated releasing an aura of incandescent red. "Must I go through every experience? The gift you seek is evident!" He muttered something in his native language, then stopped in mid-air having regained his composure. "Now think earthling. Think of all the problems that arise from the division of your people. Family arguments; labor and management disputes; big business vs. the average man; political disputes and the tragic deaths of some of your nation's leaders. Think of the bombings and kidnappings brought about to supposedly settle some dispute between two opposing ideas. Am I expecting too much of you? Why, the answer is as clear as the ring around Zalthania!"

He became very still, and silence, like a shroud, enveloped us. Then ever so softly, almost in a whisper, he said, "Unity." Then louder, "Unity among your people. I realize that your system of government is based upon the idea of individual freedom, so the division of your views is almost an exercise in democracy. But think how beautiful it would be to present your nation with unity. Everyone could live in harmony. There would be no more fighting, only love and brotherhood."

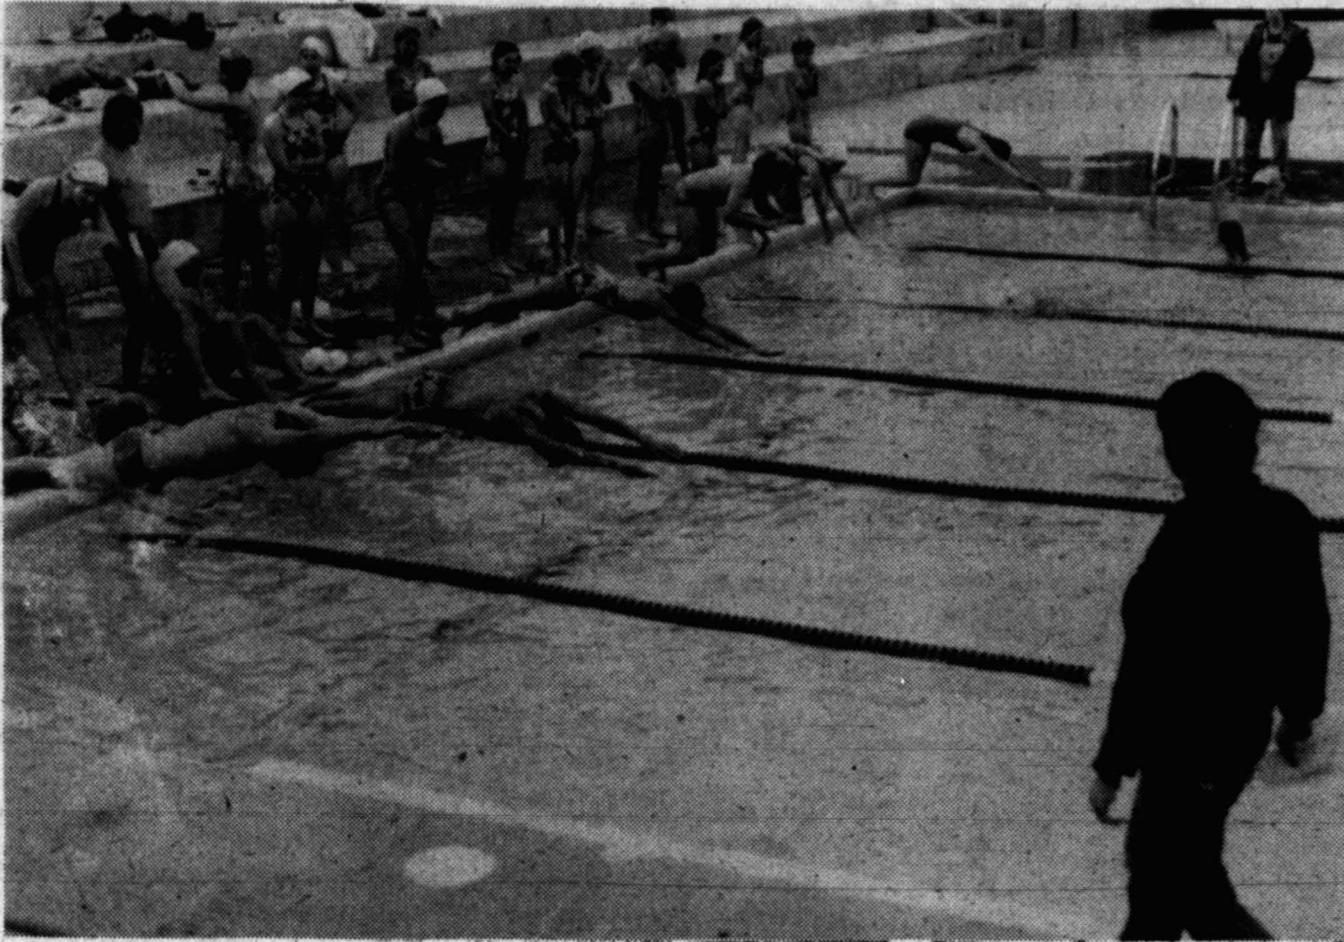

The little being smiled sheepishly. I was suddenly aware of the beauty of his idealism. As he slowly began to fade away in a shimmer of light, I couldn't help but wonder if he was asking too much from my people.

Dressage show set May 29-30

The Carmel Valley Chapter of the California Dressage Society will be hosting the second annual Spring Dressage Show the weekend of May 29 and 30. The show will be held at the Stonegate Stables which is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Moiso and is located at 25 Los Robles Rd. in Carmel Valley.

The show will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, and will run all day. Saturday will include classes for training and first level, the basic suppling movements, making the horse responsive and obedient, and Sunday will feature the higher level rides, with classes offered through Grand Prix. Hilda Gurney and her horse Keen, 1976 Pan American Games Silver Medal winner and Olympic hopeful, will be riding in the Grand Prix and Grand Prix Special.

Judges for the show are Lt. Col. Hans Moeller from Los Altos Hills and Jane Jackson from Los Angeles. Steward for the show will be Linda Shewchuk from Pebble Beach, and the show will be managed by Paula Langan of Carmel Valley.

A champagne lunch will be served both Saturday and Sunday. No admission fee will be charged.

Barracudas kick-off new season

The 1976 swim season is underway for the Carmel Barracudas, and a "Kick-Off" week of special events is planned, according to head coach, Larry Challis.

A stroke, start, and turn clinic is set for Saturday, May 22 at the Carmel High Pool from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Children from 6-18, beginners or advanced are welcome. A diving clinic is also planned.

The annual potluck dinner for team members and their families will be held on Sunday, May 23, from 5-6:30 p.m. in the multipurpose room at Tularcitos School. Speakers will include Challis and his coaching staff, who will preview the summer program and show slides of previous seasons.

Basic competitive swimming and diving technique classes are available to all children in the Carmel area every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 3:30-5 p.m. at the Carmel High Pool and from 5:30-7 p.m. at the Carmel Valley Community Pool. Further information may be obtained from Challis at 659-4670 or the Carmel Recreation Department at 624-3342.

The Barracudas next meet will be the Salinas Open "Y" Meet on May 29-31.

ZONE II VACANCY

Supervisor Sam Farr, representing the 5th Supervisory District, is seeking applications for a vacancy on the Zone II Water Advisory Committee.

Zone II was formed in 1971 to advise the county Board of Supervisors of water supply and distribution problems on the Monterey Peninsula. The Zone's boundaries are approximately the same as that of Cal American Water Company, a privately owned utility.

Persons interested in serving should have time to attend one meeting each month and should be capable of digesting a great deal of information. The meetings are generally held on the Peninsula the second Monday of the month.

Applications should be sent to Sam Farr, 1200 Agua Jito Rd., Monterey, CA 93940. The appointment will be made within a month.

UFM GROUP LEADER OPENINGS

The University for Man (UFM) is preparing for its summer and fall offerings and has a number of openings for volunteer class leaders. According to UFM coordinator Sherry Pastor there have been requests for classes in bridge, painting, hiking, numerous crafts, conversational Spanish and other practical skills such as carpentry. Summer classes will begin in July and fall classes will start in October. Prospective group leaders should contact UFM by May 20 for the summer program. Call Sherry Pastor at 649-1150, ext. 283.

Summer Y camps planned

The Monterey Peninsula YMCA will launch its 10th season of camping on June 14, H. William Berg, executive director of the YMCA announced.

The YMCA will offer three types of camping this summer, providing an opportunity for approximately 732 peninsula and Monterey County youngsters. All Y Camps are open for both boys and girls.

The Y-Adventure Day Camp is open to youngsters who have completed the first grade. Adventure Camp provides activities including swimming at the Salinas Y pool, boat ride on Monterey bay; an overnight campout experience, with a campfire and cooking over an open fire. There will be nine sessions of Adventure Camp, beginning June 14 through August 20. Each session of Adventure Camp has openings for 64 children.

The YMCA Resident Camp program located on Lake Sequoia has been expanded this summer.

Mrs. Mary Lee Shephard of Carmel and Palo Alto will present a piano concert on Sunday, May 23 at 4 p.m. in the Carmel Valley Community Chapel on Village Road.

She is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music in New York where she studied for six years with Joseph and Rosina Lhevine. Since then, she has done extensive work in Palo Alto with Adolphe Baller, the pianist and chamber music artist. Mrs. Shephard has given numerous recitals in the San Francisco Bay Area and follows this appearance in Carmel Valley with a concert in Spokane, Washington in June.

The public is invited to this recital and to the reception immediately afterwards in Fellowship Hall. Donations will benefit the church music fund.

THE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY is alive and well and is located in the former Esperanto Coffee House in Sunset Center. With space at a minimum, not all books will be placed on shelves. But Alice Terrell, Children's Librarian, lost in the boxes of books, promises to search through boxes if a book is needed. Story hours have resumed and are held each Wednesday at 3 p.m. Library hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. The phone number is 624-1221. The Children's Library will be in its temporary home through August when the remodeling at the Harrison Memorial Library will be completed.

FIFTY PROFESSIONAL ARTISTS from California and other western states will exhibit in Del Monte Shopping Center's eighth annual World of Art, Friday through Monday, May 28 through Memorial Day, May 21. The artists will display hundreds of paintings, etchings, and sculptures throughout the mall. Many of the exhibitors will be working showing visitors to Del Monte Shopping Center how they go about creating their art. Shown is Artist Joan Graber from Cupertino with paintings of children she'll show at Del Monte Center.

MPC registration due

Students using Monterey Peninsula College's new alphabetical system of appointments for enrollment will start registering for summer classes on Monday May 24, according to Sally Jones, MPC registrar.

In order to eliminate long registration lines for summer and fall, MPC students have the option of making an appointment for registration or following a walk-in procedure where no appointment is necessary.

Walk-in registration for summer will be held June 9, 10 and 11. The summer sessions begins June 14.

Students following the appointment procedure, which began April 19, go to the admission office for a registration appointment date on the days of the week designated by the first letter of their last name: On Mondays, students whose last name starts with the letters D, E, F, G or H may make an appointment; on Tuesdays, those whose last name starts with N, O, P, Q, or R may make appointments; on Wednesday, those with the letters S, T, U, V, W, X, Y and Z; on Thursdays, the letters are I, J, K, L and M and on Fridays, A, B and C.

Registration fees for the summer session will include a $2.50 college center fee. Each student will be charged a $1 health fee. More information may be obtained at the college or by calling 649-1150, ext. 210, 211 and 371.

The Carmel Little League will hold its annual Family Day festivities at the Little League field, Rio Road and Ladera Drive Sunday, May 23, between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Family Day traditionally is a time for parents and friends of the local Little League's three divisions to get together on a social basis.

Activities have been scheduled throughout the day. On the baseball field, a Home Run Derby is scheduled for the morning, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. At 1 p.m. an auction is scheduled with two exhibition soccer games arranged for the afternoon. From 2 to 3 p.m. the Senior League coaches and umpires will take on the Little League coaches and umpires, and at 3 p.m. a Moms vs. Dads game is slated.

In the food department, the organizers have prepared a barbecue, with a hamburger, chili and a salad for $1.25. This will be served from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. Additionally, the snack bar will be open for candy, popcorn, and other snacks, including sno-cones.

There will be "booth" games, including fish pond, cane toss, junior basketball and a cake walk.

BURRILL

Charlotte Emma Burrill, 89, died May 7 at the Pilgrim Haven Convalescent Home in Los Altos.

Mrs. Burrill, a former resident of Carmel, was born March 16, 1887 in Chicago. She and her husband, the Rev. Charles H. Burrill lived in Carmel from 1948-62.

In addition to her husband she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. K. Fillmore Gray of Walnut Creek; and two grandsons.

Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Criticism all part...

Safeway at the mouth of Carmel Valley had 350 shoplifting arrests over a five month period. At the time, conviction meant three days in jail, but when Harrah changed that to 10 days, the shoplifting problem ceased.

"Nothing cures kleptomania quicker than 10 days in jail," Harrah attests.

But Harrah has no illusions about his job. He says: "Those are human beings in front of you, they're breathing, they have their own problems and live in their own world — it's not always easy to make a firm decision."

Harrah says he has been criticised because he won't dismiss a case or take a lesser plea just to dispose of it, but he feels that if there is evidence enough to warrant a charge against someone, that person should answer to it. He doesn't care if a person is tried and then acquitted, just as long as the charges are faced.

Fines in the municipal court are up to $1,000 per month, which Harrah finds regrettable since that money could be put to much better uses, but at least that figure proves he's busy in the courtroom.

"My court calendar compares favorably with the rest of the state," Harrah asserts, and says he hasn't received any more criticism for his decisions than other judges.

Although Harrah has been accused of being too tough, he says jail certainly isn't the answer to everything, but it is a deterrent in cases where people will not lean another way.

"We're talking about self-discipline," Harrah explains, "You have rights I have to respect, that's the only way we can all live together."

Harrah worries about young people trying to bring up children in this permissive world and trying to set standards for that child.

"We've developed a Dr. Spock idea of excusing and rationalizing," he says.

But Harrah has no intention of bringing this laxitude over into his courtroom. He views punishment as a remedy that can keep an offense from happening again.

Public contact in court...

for the judicial system," Goyne says.

Goyne talks about prostitutes getting 60 days automatically for a first offense in Harrah's court, and 45 days for a second offense. Multiple-offense drunk drivers usually get off with very little, according to Goyne.

"If you fill the jail up with prostitutes while people are suffering crimes of violence in the street," Goyne says, "I think you should have to explain why."

Goyne feels the judge should bring the limited power of the court to bear most effectively on crimes most dangerous to people and property.

"We must set priorities," Goyne insists.

Goyne feels Harrah's priorities, considering his record, are in the wrong place. The complaints voiced publicly by community members who have come up before Harrah are "just the very tip of the iceberg," according to Goyne.

"Americans are entitled by law and tradition to fair and impartial courts," he says.

Goyne, who is now an Inheritance Tax Referee, has had eight years of trial work. He graduated from Hastings in 1967 and began working in the public defenders office in Alameda County.

"There were only 21 of us in the office back then," Goyne says, "now there are 100 public defenders. We were pretty busy."

Goyne went from juvenile court to the felony trial staff and took part in quite a number of felony jury trials.

including murder cases.

He set up private practice in Hayward for a year, decided he'd rather be living on the Monterey Peninsula, and joined the public defenders office here in 1971. Goyne is a Certified Criminal Law Specialist.

Goyne sees the job of municipal court judge as a tough one.

"The judge has thousands of cases that have to be settled and decided," Goyne says. "He makes thousands of decisions."

Therefore, a judge has to be able and willing to listen to both sides.

"The judge has an active role in the court," Goyne claims. "Judges are a limited resource and that resource has to be applied properly."

"Justice for all and the rule by law is the only issue of this election," Goyne maintains. "And, it is right and proper for a free people in a free election to decide this issue."

Investment
expert to speak

Claude N. Rosenberg of San Francisco, author of three books on investments and the founder of an investment management firm in San Francisco, will speak on "Investment Opportunities for the Balance of the Seventies" on Friday, May 21 at Monterey Peninsula College.

The public is invited to the lecture which is free. It will begin at 8 p.m. in Lecture Forum 102.

Rosenberg was born in San Francisco in 1928 and received his M.B.A. from the Stanford Graduate School of Business in 1952. He built what was to become the largest research department in the western U.S. while he was a partner of J. Barth & Company of San Francisco in the 1960s. In 1970, he formed his own investment management firm, Rosenberg Capital Management.

Rosenberg is the author of "Stock Market Primer," "The Common Sense Way to Stock Market Profits" and "Psycho-Cybernetics and the Stock Market." Looked upon as the pioneer of formalized regional research in the U.S., Rosenberg was a recent guest on the Public Broadcasting System television program, "Wall Street Week" and is mentioned in the April 26 issue of New West magazine.

Photos exhibited

The work of two students from the Monterey Peninsula College Photography Department are on display through May 28 in the MPC Learning Center.

A portfolio built around the concept, "Where Your Head's At," is the work of Peter A. Andersen, a second semester student. Andersen was born in Denmark and has been studying photography for the last six years. He has been in the United States for two years.

Rei Cortez studied at Pasadena City College and Prince George College.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to all persons bearing any interest in the matter, that the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, will conduct a Public Hearing in the Council Chambers of said City on Tuesday, June 8, 1976, at the hour of 8:00 p.m., or as soon thereafter as interested persons may be heard, to consider the following:

A proposed Ordinance entitled "AN ORDINANCE AMENDING THE SIGN REGULATIONS WITHIN THE CITY TO MEET STATE REQUIREMENTS AND A REORGANIZATION OF FORMAT AND DEFINITION OF EXISTING SIGN REGULATIONS."

The amendments proposed would bring the ordinance into conformity

SAVE THE COAST PANEL (right to left) Former Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson, architect Nathaniel Owings and nature photographer and conservationist Ansel Adams spoke in favor of the Coastal Plan at a panel sponsored by the Monterey County Alliance to Save Our Coast. Each man urged the citizens to get out and work for passage of the Beilenson Bill (SB 1579) which embodies most of the Coastal Commission's plan for the coast. The alliance consists of 11 organizations and includes the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club as well as various other conservation groups and property owner organizations in the area. The alliance is chaired by Ken Wood. Supporters of the bill were asked to contact their legislators and urged to attend a May 25 rally at the State Capitol in Sacramento at noon which will be held to show support for SB 1579.

CONSTRUCTION HAS BEGUN on the new McFarland Building, which will contain 10 shops and office space on the second floor. Construction time is estimated at about six months.

AN APPRECIATIVE FAMILY WHO WILL LOVE ME FOR WHAT I AM.....A BEAUTIFUL HOME

I was the architectural creation of Dennis Hodgin and first broke ground in November 1974. The family that brought me here promised to love and live with me forever, but now they have to relocate for business reasons.

I'm full of open spaces and lots of windows. Most of my rooms look through the pines, across Monterey town, the Bay and the mountains beyond. I get lots of sun in Alta Mesa and people tell me it's the best weather on the peninsula.

I'm multi-level, nearly 4,000 square feet of warmth and interesting features. In addition to my four (or five) bedrooms, four full baths, I have a billiard room, workshop, two-car garage, wine cellar and laundry room. And my gourmet kitchen has been the scene of numerous feasts of culinary art.

To see me is to know me and to know me is to love me. You can acquire me for a modest $165,000. You can get acquainted with me by calling 649-6373.

Sincerely,
CASA DE LUCA

UNUSUAL

The following houses all have that something "different" that makes you immediately comfortable and happy.

If you need 4 bedrooms plus a den, a family room with fireplace downstairs and a gorgeous 28 ft. living room up this may be just for you. 3 1/2 baths, family kitchen, every possible custom extra, and just 3 years old! $145,000.

Or perhaps you would love to be the first owners of this shining new charmer, nestled under towering pines and with warmth and privacy. Of course 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, family room with second fireplace. Owner-agent. $109,500.

How about 6 bedrooms? 3 years ago this beauty was built with imagination and love. Nothing was spared and the results are fantastic. $175,000.

For the young at heart, you must see this 4 bedroom, new and definitely contemporary house. On a greenbelt with a feeling of spring. Owner-agent. $125,000.

"A NEW CONCEPT IN REAL ESTATE FOR THE MONTEREY PENINSULA"

IT'S SPRING

And once again all around us the flowers and trees are blooming. But, in the Carmel area this year, the newness and freshness of the season has been greeted by two brand new homes.

In beautiful Carmel Views, you may watch Spring unfold around this 4 Bedroom family home which also has a den that may be used as a 5th Bedroom. The exterior is quite impressive with distinctive roof lines and circular driveway, while the interior features an effective use of skylights, windows, and beam ceilings. The entire two thirds acres of land is useable for outdoor activities... perhaps a swimming pool. A home for all seasons. $138,500.

Overlooking the 6th Green of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club is a 3 Bedroom, 3 Bath, "French Country Styled" home. You will experience a very spacious feeling with the back yard opening onto the fairway and the side yard bordering a greenbelt. This home truly has quality appointments throughout and there are many special features including extensive use of exterior brick. A very distinctive home that you will enjoy not only in Springtime but also throughout the year. $149,500.

Carmel Valley

If you are looking for comfort and quality in a home; if you love peace, serenity, the warmth and light of the sun and lovely, expansive views, then we suggest that you come and see this new home in Carmel Valley.

It sits nestled in and above the oaks on a beautiful 1.07 acre site on a crest of Chapareal road at Arboleda Lane, overlooking the Holman ranch to the east and down the valley to the sea from the west.

The numbers read 3 bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, a family room, etc. etc. in 2,700 sq. ft. of living space, coupled with a 3 car garage and much, much more.

Give us a call if you have any questions and then come and see the home and feel the area. We know it will be well worth your while. $139,500.

Two For The Price Of One

Downtown Carmel—two little cottages at 6th and Lincoln — to hold until you want to build — there is an income now to help with the payments, but now is the time to pick this bargain up at only $58,500.00.

A Lot With Water

In beautiful CARMEL RIVIERA — a water view — they are getting scarce, and water meters may be getting more expensive. This rare lot is priced to sell at $33,500.

Pebble Beach

The most spectacular view lot in the entire area, we think, and built upon this spot is one of the finest custom homes that we can find today... 4 large beautiful bedrooms — each with its own bath — a formal dining room-den-large expansive living room — and of course, a beautifully landscaped yard all fenced in — The price is $350,000.00 and can be viewed by appt.

Carmel Woods

For the craftsman and the people who are looking for something just a little bit different — we are offering the unusual in design and construction, in a woodsy quiet setting... $112,500.00

South of Ocean Avenue

If your budget will allow you the best in quality and location for $125,000 — you should hurry on this one — the right size-2 bedrooms and 2½ baths — and charm galore — in a new and different way.

Carmel Knolls

The ideal family home — 4 bedrooms and 2 baths — a large yard — a view has been recently rebuilt and the open beam ceiling — the huge rock fireplace and the spiral staircase give this delightful home, a feeling of warmth and coziness... all for $125,000.00

A Carmel Shack

Near Santa Fe and 5th. One a beautiful 40 x 100 foot lot, for only $47,500. Compare this with others that are advertised for less.

A Home near the Lodge

For Those with Flair, Imagination

You've probably seen this home in magazines or newspapers which delight in featuring such a fascinating property, but even so, you're not really prepared for the serendipity experiences at every turn.

Extraordinary home designed by Marcel Sedletzky, AIA, for artistic owners who loved friends and privacy equally, so it's a sophisticated design, but highly livable, and planned to pleasure the family as well as guests.

Multi-levels and many built-ins define interior spaces and give interest and privacy to the four bedrooms and main living areas. All windows take advantage of the incomparable setting on a green belt just above the Lodge, with ocean and forest views.

Plan to see this stunning home soon. It has so little maintenance and gardening required that it is as ideal for part-time use as it is for a permanent home.

Sources of Energy—No. 5 of a series

If solar energy can help heat a house, why can't it run a power plant?

The answer is clouded

PG&E, like a number of other utilities and research organizations, is working on practicable ways to use the sun's energy. Areas that show the greatest promise include heating of homes and buildings, and water heating, including swimming pools.

Using the sun's energy to produce electric power is far more difficult and complicated and is too expensive to use today. And, because the sun only works one shift, conventional power plants will be needed at night or when the sun doesn't shine. Or else ways must be developed for large scale storage of electricity.

Research is under way to develop more efficient solar "cells," to convert the sun's energy directly into electricity. Other research is aimed at using the sun's heat to make steam, or to heat gases, to run turbine generators producing electricity. We hope that continuing research will pay off and that toward the end of the century the sun will be providing a significant portion of needed electricity.

Other sources of energy

There are 5 sources of primary energy which PG&E now uses for generating electricity.

Northern California has one of the nation's most extensive hydroelectric systems. It produces relatively inexpensive electricity, but nearly all economic and acceptable hydro sites have already been developed. That's why natural gas and oil had to become more prominent in our energy mix.

Unfortunately, the costs of these fossil fuels have been skyrocketing. In the last 5 years, the price of fuel oil has increased sixfold and the price for natural gas has tripled, accounting for most of our rate increases.

PG&E has the nation's only geothermal power development, largest in the world, and we are expanding it. However, we estimate it will supply only about 10 percent of our needs by 1985.

These limitations are reasons why our fifth primary source of energy, nuclear, is so important, and why we, like other utility systems here and abroad, have turned to uranium as power plant fuel. When our two nuclear units at Diablo Canyon go into operation they can produce electricity for about 40% less than new oil-fired plants, despite higher initial construction costs.

Coal one day may be our sixth source of primary energy. We are in the process of acquiring reserves in Utah.

Wind, solar, garbage, tides, ocean thermal differences, fusion and other developing technologies may someday help us supply your energy. Some may take years to prove out. Others may never become efficient or reliable enough to be competitive. But if and when they are ready, we'll be ready, too. In the meantime, we must meet your demands for electricity.

Facing the problem together

The demand for electricity continues to grow, partly because population itself different breeds, Del Monte is expected to retain its ranking as one of the top 50 dog shows in the United States in total entries.

Judging in both the conformation and obedience rings will begin at 8 a.m. and continue all day with the Best in Show selection to be made at approximately 5 p.m. There will be a $1 parking fee at the Polo Grounds; however, this will be good for the entire day's events.

Del Monte earnings up

Increased first quarter earnings were reported by Del Monte Properties Company.

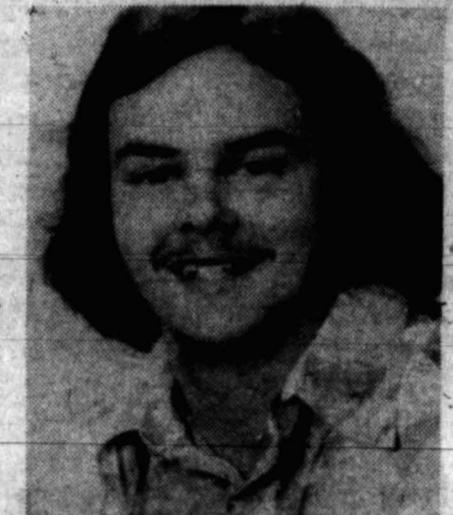

Net income for the diversified company for the first quarter was $492,000, a 63 per cent increase over the same period last year.

Earnings per common share were 30 cents for the quarter, as compared with 17 cents recorded for the first three months a year ago.

All divisions, Resort and Recreation, Real Estate, and Wedron Silica, increased their earnings over the same period the previous year.

Occupancy rates at the Del Monte Lodge and levels of play on the Pebble Beach Links, Spyglass Hill and Old Del Monte golf courses were consistently strong.

KRISTOPHER K.J. JOHNSON, among the top five students in his senior class at Robert Louis Stevenson School, and National Merit Scholar, has just been notified that he has received four major awards in the 1976 National Scholastic Magazine Writing Contest. Both his dramatic script entitled "The Vivarium" and his song, "Chablis" have won first places; his short-short story "A Very Special Merry-Go-Round" won a fourth place. In addition, his dramatic script won the distinction of being one of the five best manuscripts submitted of the 18,000 total. Kristopher was class president in both his freshman and sophomore years and during the first semester of his junior year. He has been the Senior Editor of the school literary magazine, The Valima and Senior and Copy Editor of the school's newspaper the Tusitala. This year he was named a National Winner in the Editorial Division of the Quill and Scroll's Society's writing contest. He has achieved Faculty Honors for three years and the English department award for four consecutive years. He was the RLS Boys' State Representative. In the athletic area, Kristopher has competed on the RLS Varsity Track Team during his freshman, sophomore, and junior years. Kristopher's parents are Mrs. A. Dwight Kester of Pebble Beach and Dr. Kenneth Johnson of Walnut Creek, Ca.
